Pebble Beach Co. sold to Japanese-owned firm

By DAVID LELAND

PEBBLE BEACH Co. owners confirmed Wednesday that the company has been sold to the Japanese-owned Ben Hogan Properties for an undisclosed amount of money.

The company was formerly owned by the Chicago-based partnership of Miller, Klutznick, Davis & Gray.

The deal is effective immediately and no changes in management or staffing are scheduled to take place, according to a statement issued by the Pebble Beach Co.

"We are excited about this new alliance," said Pebble Beach Co. president Tom Oliver. "Our combined decades of experience will assure that Pebble Beach will remain among the world's finest golfing resorts."

The sale includes the Pebble Beach Golf Links, The Lodge at Pebble Beach, The Inn and Links at Spanish Bay, 17-Mile Drive, Spyglass Hill Golf Course, Del Monte Golf Course in Monterey, the undeveloped Old Capitol site in Monterey and undeveloped properties in Pebble Beach and the Monterey Peninsula.

The sale will not affect the planned residential program for the Del Monte Forest, an application for 359 units, senior care and low-income housing currently on file with Monterey County, according to sources.

Ben Hogan Co., which manufactures golf clubs and sportswear, is owned by Minoru Isutani, who has made his fortune in golf course development and computer software distribution in Japan.

Isutani who also owns Cosmo World Corp. in Los Angeles, a subsidiary of Cosmo 80 in Tokyo, purchased Ben Hogan Co. in 1988 for $52 million.

In a prepared statement Ben Hogan Properties said, "It is a great honor to become the owner of this prestigious golf resort. We highly praise the current operational methods of Pebble Beach Co. We do not contemplate any changes in management personnel or management style. We pledge to make every effort to supplement and expand these excellent facilities."

Ben Hogan Properties president, David B. Hueber added, "We are committed to operating Pebble Beach at the same high standards that everyone has come to expect of this world-class property."

Those close to the sale estimate that the price could be well over $1 billion.

The sale, which has been the subject of intense interest and rumors on the peninsula this summer, reached a peak earlier this week when the Pebble Beach Co. placed its five liquor licenses into escrow.

State Alcoholic Beverage Control officials are currently conducting a background check into Ben Hogan Co. before issuing the liqour licenses.

The licenses will be transferred for a total of $550,001 in cash, according to the county recorder's office.

It is unclear what the sale will mean to the county in terms of increased revenue from reassessment.

At this week's meeting of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, Monterey County Assessor Bruce Reeves requested increased staff to complete the task.

BACK WHEN Mongols roamed the Asian plains and the Crusaders went off in search of the Holy Grail, Monterey County's oldest "resident" was just a seedling.

Most people don't know about this oldtimer — the county's largest tree — because it's hidden in a redwood canyon on 1,097 acres of private property in Carmel Valley, and the only access to Palo Corona Ranch's canyon is a private road that winds through 20,000 acres of Rancho San Carlos property.

The county's grandest tree — a California redwood — measures 60 feet in base circumference and is estimated to be about 750 years old, said Rod Mills, a trustee of the Big Sur Land Trust.

(Although the height of the tree hasn't been measured because of the complexity of doing so, the age was determined by extracting an "increment bore" from

Council OKs funds to purchase collection of Heron artifacts

By FRANK GEORGE

THE AUDIENCE at city hall Monday night applauded after the Carmel City Council unanimously appropriated $50,800 in city funds for the purchase of Herbert Heron's private collection of books and letters.

The collection will be displayed in the local history collection at Harrison Memorial Library's Park Branch, and it includes personal letters from authors Jack London and George Sterling to Heron, who founded Forest Theater and was twice the mayor of Carmel.

Funding for the artifacts will come from the city's reserve fund and operati

"The historical memory of a community gives it its identification," said City Councilwoman Barbara Brooks said in concurrence with the decision. "And the artifacts are what help us keep that memory alive."

"It's the opportunity of a lifetime," added City Councilman Ken White. "Heron was instrumental in many of the things that Carmel stands for."

White said the significance of the collection, which also includes inscribed first editions of books by such literary luminaries as London, Sinclair Lewis and Mary Austin, is the fact that these authors lived and worked in Carmel during the early part of this century.

Prior to the approval, several speakers (including mystery writer Bob Campbell, who was representing the Carmel Residents Association), implored the council to allow the library to acquire the materials.

Cecil Wahle of the Harrison Memorial Library Foundation and archivist Dr. Linda Miles Coppens, who is in charge of the local history collection at the library, went to San Francisco on Wednesday to purchase as many of the dozens of items in the collection as possible from a San Francisco bookseller, who is handling the sale of many of the Heron estate materials.

IN OTHER business, the council denied 4-1 the consideration of an appeal from ice cream store owner Jay Wiener of a Carmel Planning Commission decision.

Wiener was seeking an amendment to his use permit for his Cocogelato shop on Ocean Avenue. He wanted to add soups, sandwiches and salads to his menu, but his request was denied by the Government intrusion

Dear Editor:

Senate Bill 2580 sets up a new county water resources agency. It was engineered all the way through the state Senate, and well-started through the Assembly without any of us plain citizens being informed of it or being able to contribute input. Our first knowledge of it was a June 27 newspaper item stating that public comments on amendments to it would be received at a 2 p.m. meeting in Salinas that afternoon.

Seawater intrusion threatens Marina and Fort Ord. The life expectancy of Salinas's water supply is 17 years. Much of the vitally needed water storage capability of the Salinas Valley aquifer has already been destroyed forever. The 1989 Grand Jury sharply criticized our board of supervisors for failing to exercise its authority and responsiblity to properly manage our water resources.

Guess who was, somehow, designated by SB 2580 to manage the new water agency. Answer: Our present board of supervisors, no less.

After Watergate, Iran-Contra, the S & L coverup, et al, nothing surprises us coming from Washington, but we certainly do not need secret government tactics in our county. Without the meeting notice about receiving public input on amendments to increase SB 2580s taxing power, we still wouldn't have learned of it.

The sponsor of SB 2580, Sen. Mello, apparently took it for granted that local public input had taken place before he took it to Sacramento. His staff claimed that the June 27 meeting had been advertised in legal notices in a newspaper. It should not be necessary for county residents and taxpayers to read every item in legal notices to find out that something as important as an overall county water resources agency is being formed. Somebody within our county should have kept us informed about this legislation from the beginning, rather than quietly save all of it for a too-late, last minute surprise package.

It ain't so bad!

Dear Editor:

We came here a quarter of a century ago to enjoy life and we haven't been disappointed.

The scenery is delightful, the climate is quite satisfactory, the people are very friendly and fascinating, the shopkeepers are very cooperative and resourceful, and we have made some lovely friends to help us enjoy all this.

We have never been mugged, robbed, or burglarized. There is very little ethnic disturbance, mostly at home, my wife is a Democrat.

Before I get too carried away, there are some drawbacks: I would like a little more water and also slower traffic on the Carmel Valley Speedway. While riding my bike there one time some clown hit me square-on from the rear, she probably thought I was going too slowly. All things considered though, we are pretty close to that place of places, you know, up there.

However lately I have been having some second thoughts, after reading some letters to the editor in the Pine Cone. Apparently this is not the place I thought it was. Here are some of the complaints. The people are no longer friendly, some of them don't even live here. The shopkeepers are out to make money and some even sell to strangers. Some of the newcomers are building nice houses. It's impossible to park downtown. Hell, I thought Carmelites liked to walk!

However before listing our house for sale, incidently it's worth four times what we paid for it so the neighborhood can't be too bad, I thought of some of the amenities we have that were not here "a long time ago." Some of these letter-writers must be long of tooth to remember so far back.

How about the library with those gracious and lovely librarians. Only drawback to the library is they don't get Monday's Barrons 'til Tuesday.

The Carmel Foundation is unique in the world, first class in every way. It's like a well-run club with all kinds of activities, and of course the best food in town.

I like to go to our hospital, to see friends, sorry they are in the hospital, but going there is a pleasure. Some folks go there just for lunch it's such a nice place to be!

Carmelites might not like buses but ours are first class, nothing out-of-the-way, no roudiness, no graffiti, and for seniors, it's a steal.

I don't know what I'd do without the thrift shops. Those Rich Folks in Pebble Beach give these shops their "little used stuff" and it's great.

Incidentally those newcomers, who build high priced homes here, are paying a ton of property taxes. This means the Old Timers are getting a tax break!

I guess I just sold myself on STAYING!

Talking turkey

Dear Editor:

We are bombarded today in the media about the plight of the non-English speaking minorities. They (the minorities) are now charging discrimination because we don't learn to speak their language. With the approaching elections in June, we'll spend thousands of dollars printing ballots in Spanish, Chinese, and maybe other languages.

It's time to go back to Square One. When our forefathers established this country, they came from all over the world, from Germany, Ireland, France, The Netherlands, Italy, Poland, Japan, as well as English speaking Great Britain. And these are by no means all the cultures and languages that came into our great melting pot.

When we wrote our Constitution we agreed that this would be an English-speaking nation. That didn't condemn and discriminate against any race, creed, culture or language. We are proud of the heritage we have as a result of the mingling in us of all the many natinalities that make us AMERICAN.

So, I have to talk "turkey" to the Hispanics, the Chinese, the Vietnamese, and any others who feel concerned about this. We love you and are glad to have you here, but if you want to live among us, it's time for you to join the team. Learn to read, write, and speak ENGLISH. That's the American national language. Let it be yours.

Preserve your cultural heritage, but be proud to be an American. Become citizens, get yourselves registered and exercise that God-given American freedom to VOTE.

Make it count

Dear Editor:

As the dust settles from the primary election I find it necessary to address a few words to the voters of Monterey County. In the election held on June 5 nearly 61,000 voters in Monterey County cast ballots. Absentee voting is convenient and becoming an increasingly popular method of voting.

The vast majority of absentee voters follow the instructions sent with their ballots. However there is a minority of these voters who fail to follow the instructions and take a high risk of having their votes go uncounted. The datavote voting system used in Monterey County is very easy to use for absentee voters. Voters simply need to punch out the pre-scored hole next to the candidate or issue for which they are voting. Unfortunately a number of voters still insist on marking their ballots with a pen or pencil. Our computer can't read those ballots. Still other voters insist of punching holes in their ballot cards with hole punches. Not only is this unnecessary, but the holes punched by hand-held hole punches also cannot be read by our computer.

Voters who failed to follow instructions caused the Election Department to spend many hours duplicating ballots to ensure that the voters' choices were recorded. These extra hours cost hundreds, if not thousands of dollars, in extra staff time. The Monterey County Election Department goes to extraordinary lengths to ensure that every vote is counted and that the voters' choices are properly registered. However voters who fail to follow the printed instructions of the voting system add cost to the administration of elections and risk having their votes go uncounted.

Any voter who wishes to vote by absentee ballot is encouraged to do so, but please read and follow the instructions to insure that your vote counts.

A call to arms

A WONDERFUL opportunity awaits peninsula residents — the chance to tell federal officials, first-hand, how our Monterey Bay Sanctuary should be protected in perpetuity.

Keep in mind that many residents have been lulled into complacency because of President Bush's moratorium on offshore drilling through the year 2000. Others believe that the preliminary draft environmental study issued for the proposed sanctuary already provides adequate protection. Misinformed people are dropping out of the public process, tantamount to quitting a race before the last lap is completed.

In reality, major issues still need to be resolved before the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) completes its final environmental statement and submits it to Congress for approval.

The Carmel Pine Cone believes that now is the time for those who cherish the Monterey Bay to seek the largest boundary area possible. NOAA has recommended boundaries that, on the north, allow for offshore drilling just outside the sanctuary. On the south, the proposal stops short of protecting the sea otter refuge just below Big Sur.

It is important for residents to let NOAA officials know that we mean business; we won't settle for half measures when it comes to protecting our Monterey Bay, truly a national treasure.

We also must let NOAA know that we will not stand for any sewage being dumped into the bay by neighboring jurisdictions. We must ask for the highest standards of protection, nothing else will suffice.

Also, testimony must be presented opposing commercial vessel traffic in or near the sanctuary, only then can we prevent accidents involving oil transports.

By showing interest before the sanctuary status is granted, NOAA will be convinced that area residents are well informed and interested in the Monterey Bay. With that in mind, increased local involvement in managing the sanctuary must be fully realized.

Again, we urge you to attend and testify before NOAA at the public hearing. The gathering is scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 12, at the Monterey City Council Chambers at Pacific and Madison streets.

Additional hearings will take place 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 13, at Santa Cruz Vet's Memorial Hall at 846 Front St.; and 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 14, at Half Moon Bay Community Center at 535 Kelly St.

Wonderful experience

Dear Editor:

For the past three years, our 5-year-old grand-daughter has attended "story time" at the children's branch of the Harrison Memorial Library. There are stories, songs, games, and always a craft project related to the stories of the week. The staff and volunteers are warm, affectionate women who are very interested in children.

It is a wonderful pre-school experience for the children of this community. In the coming years, I'm sure all of these children will feel at home in their library. Many thanks to those who provide this experience.

Many social programs face ax in county budget

By DAVID LELAND

FACED WITH a dramatic $3.9 million shortfall in state funding, county supervisors this week grappled with a $278 million budget that is destined to cut a swath of wreckage through many essential county programs.

Simply said, the state budget reduces revenues and increases costs to the state's 58 counties. Affected services include mental health, trial court funding and homeless assistance.

Things, however, could be worse.

"We're far from the bankruptcy that is facing other counties throughout the state," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman.

To complicate matters, the state Legislature has opened up new ways for the county to raise money, which is sure to alienate county officials from their constituents.

In addition to charging cities for administering property tax and booking inmates into county jail, the county assessor's office will now charge school and special districts for administering property taxes.

"The inherent inequity behind the legislation...provided no satisfactory time either for debate, for public input or for local jurisdictions to plan and budget for its consequences," said Auditor/Controller Jack Skillicorn, who is faced with the task of recovering money from schools and special districts.

The move presents a double whammy for the county's library system, which will be forced to pay $39,000 in administration fees to the assessor's office, while already having had $30,000 trimmed from its budget from the state Legislature.

"It's going to slow down the process of automating our library system," said Dallas Schaffer, county librarian.

Schaffer added that automation is cost-effective in allowing librarians to perform tasks other than simply locating books for patrons.

Funding for city library contracts from the county library are in no danger of being affected until at least December of 1991, when those contracts expire.

(See related story on the budget's effect on the Carmel Unified School District.)

Supervisors stopped short of levying a tax on license fees and utility taxes.

Built into this year's budget, revenue from those programs will total about $9 million, leaving a shortfall of $900,000, according to the preliminary budget.

That money will be made up from the county's $3.7 million contingency fund, according to Ernest Morishita, county administrative officer.

Morishita cautioned supervisors against allowing their contingency fund to dip below $2 million, which will be left after setting aside $1.7 million for salary adjustments.

"It's imperative that the contingency fund be kept at $2 million," said Morishita, adding that last year the contingency fund began at $1.2 million and dipped to $115,000 by fiscal year's end.

MORISHITA CHARGED that the state Legislature was involved in "major questionable actions," such as allowing deferred payments, when its own budget was approved.

He added that an additional $4 million to $4.5 million could be cut from Monterey County next year.

"I think it's unfortunate that cities and special districts have been taken advantage of," said 3rd District Supervisor Tom Perkins. "This is not an appropriate way to conduct business."

While the budget hearings will continue at least through Thursday, supervisors lobbied for programs earlier in the week.

'I think it's unfortunate that cities and special districts have been taken advantage of. This is not an appropriate way to conduct business.'

— Tom Perkins

Strasser Kauffman said proposed cuts in mental health are unacceptable.

"It's a great disappointment that mental health was not even minimally supported on the state level," said Strasser Kauffman, adding that new programs at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula face extinction. "If we need to backfill anywhere, we need to backfill here."

She also listed funding the county's Planning and Building Department and the county's affirmative action program as priorities.

"I'd like us to be particularly creative when it comes to financing this year."

Supervisors balked at having to find county funding for state-mandated programs.

"I think it's about time to give these programs back to the state," said 4th District Supervisor Sam Karas, adding that the current budget is the result of a "lack of foresight and courage on behalf of the state Legislature."

Carmel schools face huge cut in budget

AS A result of recent action by the county assessor's office, the Carmel Unified School District may be facing teacher layoffs and increased class size during the coming year.

Earlier this week, County Auditor/Controller Jack Skillicorn confirmed that he will begin charging school districts and special districts for administering money garnered by those agencies via property taxes.

"No matter what decision you make, you are not going to make everyone happy," said Skillicorn, who was authorized by the state Legislature to charge the districts to help defray county budget cuts. "I am taking this step with considerable reluctance, knowing that it will impose an additional hardship on many jurisdictions that already suffer from lack of funds."

The result: the CUSD will have to fork over $183,770 of its $11.5 million budget, or the equivalent of $87 per student.

"I think we will have to struggle to maintain the programs we've had for the past few years," said Vance Baldwin, assistant superintendent, adding that by the end of the month he will have a better idea where the cuts will come from.

He added that the district will lobby by politicians in Sacramento to overturn the law, which takes effect Jan. 1.

In addition to possible class size increases and teacher layoffs, Baldwin said cuts could occur in the elimination of some educational programs.

Moreover, already facing $5 million in capital improvement needs, Baldwin said the district will likely "curtail" grounds maintainance and transportation improvements.

Baldwin said that the district will be able to make up some of the loss from its contingency fund, but that state law mandates that $345,000, or 3 percent of the district's budget, must be kept in reserve.

Meanwhile, for the second consecutive year, CUSD teachers began the semester without a contract. Baldwin said it is unclear how the $183,770 outlay will affect the district's ability to provide teacher raises.

While Skillicorn lamented having to tax belabored school districts, he defended his decision.

"The county itself would be deprived of one of the few means by which it can even partially recover major cuts in state financing that were made in other areas," he said. "Under the circumstances, I must regard my decision as carrying to its logical conclusion an action that the state apparently has felt was appropriate but was unable to bring itself to carry out fully."

'Browning' of local golf courses a cause for concern

By FRANK GEORGE

EVEN BEFORE consideration of a golf course rationing ordinance, "not-so-perfect" playing conditions brought on by the drought are teeing some golfers off to the point where they're seeking out greener fairways.

"One of our many members told our secretary he did not want to renew his membership because of dry conditions on the golf courses," said Don Boston, vice president of Rancho Canada Golf Club. "My concern is that if one has verbalized his concern, how many are thinking that but not saying anything about it and simply won't return?"

'You're bound to have a small amount of objections, But in fact the resorts have playable conditions. I've played a number of golf courses and they are in very playable conditions.'

— Phil Lombardi

The rationing law, Ordinance No. 50, has been debated by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board for many months. It would require area golf courses to cut their water use by up to 27 percent with either quarterly or annual collective compliance.

Representatives from the Greater Monterey Bay Golf Course Association are unhappy with the restrictive nature of the ordinance, saying brown-tinted turf would hurt the peninsula's tourism-based economy.

The hospitality industry is one sector of the economy that may already be experiencing the association's worst fears.

"It was decided we'd best forego our Monterey trip this year as a result of the not-so-perfect course conditions which has been reported," said San Diego golfer Alan B. Skuba in a letter dated Aug. 16 to Liz Dunbar, owner of the Ramada Inn in Monterey. "Hopefully, we will be back with you again next year."

Skuba, president of Marie Callender's restaurant chain, said in his letter that he represented a group of golfers numbering about 24 and that they spend about $2,500 to $3,000 on "golf, lodging, food and drink" during a five-day stay on the peninsula. This will be the first time in 18 years his group, which plays an annual tournament here, will not come to the Monterey Peninsula.

A spokesman for the Ramada Inn said this letter should be taken as a grim warning.

"It's the beginning of a possible snowball effect," said John McCord of the Ramada Inn. "It's (also) further evidence that golfers will go elsewhere unless the courses are kept in optimal conditions."

Be that as it may, the executive director of the Monterey County Hospitality Association, which represents the travel, lodging, recreation and restaurant industries in the county, doesn't see any reason for concern yet.

"You're bound to have a small amount of objections," said Phil Lombardi. "But in fact the resorts have playable conditions. I've played a number of golf courses and they are in very playable conditions."

Lombardi said he doesn't think golf courses will close because members of the association are using state-of-the-art irrigation controls.

Yet others are not so optimistic.

"Golfers who come to the Monterey Peninsula to play golf don't have to come here to play brown golf courses," said Nick Lombardo, owner of Rancho Canada. "They can go anywhere in the state or the United States and play excellent courses with green turf."

Rick Lawrence, vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the Monterey Peninsula, agrees with Lombardo.

"We live off of tourism in this community," he said. "And golf is an integral part of the hospitality industry."

Lawrence said that more than 2 million visitors come to the peninsula each year and they provide a significant flow of money; up to 80 percent of the tax revenues for the city of Carmel, for example.

"There's a tendency to think of golf as a frivolous activity for rich people," he said. "We're using the water and keeping our golf courses green because they're part of a broader industry which drives our economy."

Lawrence said, for example, people in the restaurant and hospitality industries who directly benefit from tourism, in turn spend money on dentists, doctors and chiropractors, who indirectly benefit from the industry.

'Golfers who come to the Monterey Peninsula to play golf don't have to come here to play brown golf courses. They can go anywhere in the state or the United States and play excellent courses with green turf.'

— Nick Lombardo

Water board chairman Dick Heuer said, however, that the water board is not necessarily the villain in this situation.

"There is no desire or intent on the part of the board to make the golf courses lose business," he said.

Heuer said any member of the association can request relief from the ordinance if rationing has a detrimental effect on their business.

Carmel will get the clean sweep with new machine

By FRANK GEORGE

IF YOU'VE noticed the streets of Carmel are a little cleaner these days, you can thank the Carmel Department of Public Works.

The department recently purchased a brand new $84,000 street sweeper.

"You could tell the past couple of weeks we didn't have a street sweeper," said Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem. "The town had become unsightly, depite our best efforts to pick up the debris by hand."

The department received the 26,000-pound 1990 Tymco last week and it has been operating since last Wednesday. The department made certain the huge machine had a quiet engine so it could be operated earlier in the morning before the curbs fill up with parked cars.

"I love it, it's real nice," said sweeper operator Larry Elkins. "It picks up leaves real clean, it's easy to maneuver and it has a good view."

The machine helps Elkins do his job by creating a mini 75-mile-per-hour wind cyclone within the pick-up head. On the average, it picks up four tons of debris per day.

The city purchased the truck March 6 on a $83,780 five-year lease-purchase agreement with a $15,000 down payment. Cullem said funding came from the city's General Fund, which is fed by property tax, sales tax and transient occupancy tax revenues.

Elkins washes the vehicle outside and inside every day and operates it on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 5 to 11 a.m., and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Cullem said sometimes residents pile their debris too high and Elkins has to get out of the sweeper and check the piles for rocks or large branches that might clog up the machine.

"Put them nice and low and I can pick them up real easy," Elkins suggested.

Cullem said the machine is able to pick up pine needles, sand and other trash peculiar to the area and difficult for most sweepers to clear. He said the machine will be dedicated to trash in the business districts in the summertime and pine needles in resdential areas during the winter.

The city's last street sweeper lasted eight years, according to Cullem, and the city sold it for more than $20,000, in spite of its mechanical problems. Cullem likes the idea of purchasing equipment on lease-purchase because, "If we wind up with a piece of equipment that's unsatisfactory, we can just bring it back.

"We think it's the most rugged and functional machine we could get," he added. "We're fortunate to have someone as dedicated as Larry (Elkins) and two capable mechanics who can keep it running 95 percent of the time."

Affordable housing at Holt Ranch on supes' agenda

By SUSAN BECK

AFFORDABLE HOUSING at Carmel Valley's Holt Ranch will be discussed by county supervisors at a public review next Tuesday.

The Sept. 11 hearing will start at 11 a.m. in the Monterey County Board of Supervisors chambers at the Monterey County Courthouse, 240 Church St., Salinas.

Previously scheduled for Sept. 18, the hearing is a response to an appeal made by Richard Pryor, representing anonymous developers who want to subdivide the 473-acre Holt Ranch property, located south of Carmel Valley Road, just west of Robinson Canyon Road.

The Monterey County Planning Commission denied the proposed subdivision, which would include 140 condominiums with 105 of the units available to people with low to moderate incomes, the remaining to be sold at market rates. Also, there would be 70 estate-sized lots, ranging from 1 to 30 acres, for sale.

Pryor, convinced that the valley is in dire need of low-income housing, previously said that the main objection comes from Carmel Valley residents who don't want low-income people living in their neighborhoods.

Those opposing the subdivision agree that low-income housing is necessary in the valley. They consider Pryor's plan, however, a burden to the existing traffic and water supply problems. In addition, the Holt Ranch is located in one of the most visible locations in Carmel Valley.

New library computer should allay high-tech fears

By FRANK GEORGE

CARMEL'S HARRISON Memorial Library is installing new computer equipment and software this month, which should calm recent criticism of the library's computerized card catalog system.

Even so, at least one of the problems reported by some critics will not be solved for the time being.

"People are still going to get their exercise walking between the two (library) buildings," said Assistant Library Director Letitia Bennett. "That was a decision made by the city council and the library board when they decided to build at the Park Branch rather than adding a building on Lincoln or behind the main library."

'I didn't think the old system was the easiest to use, particularly for children, but I'm really anxious to try the new software.'
— Karen Huntington

The library's computer system had come under some fire as of late. Some citizens voiced their complaints in letters to the editor of the Carmel Pine Cone. One piqued library user is Carmel resident Karen Huntington.

In a letter published in the Aug. 30 Pine Cone, Huntington threatened to patronize another library because she was upset with the computer system and because she and her children did not like traversing between the two branches.

"I guess that's really my biggest complaint, the fact that they have separated the two branches," said Huntington. "I also didn't feel the old one was a user-friendly software package."

The new system should appease most library patrons with its ease of use.

"The basic difference between the old software and the new, is that by pressing the return key, a search can be done," Bennett said. She said the old system had a slower response and it was necessary to press one of the function keys to find a title.

Also, an individual can find out if a volume is out on loan with the new system, Bennett said.

"The old system just came up with the fact that we had the title and where it was on the shelves."

An ALTOS 1075 mini-computer is replacing the current system that runs the library's computerized functions, Bennett said. The library's staff has used the circulation system supplied by CLSI (Computer Library Systems International) since 1985. Last year a public access on-line catalog computer system, called HARRY, replaced the traditional card catalog.

That bold leap into the high-tech age didn't sit well with some library patrons, but most of them have taken to the system like ducks to water.

According to Bennett, advantages of the new system over the old include faster computer response time, enhancements to circulation functions and on-line catalog, and a standard operating system, UNIX.

The old system, in fact, was an interim for the new one, Bennett explained.

"We contracted in '87 for the new system, and we're just now getting it in '90," she said.

The previous system cost $1,570 per month for cataloging, maintenance and circulation, and this price tag will continue for the new one.

While the new equipment is being installed, library staff will use micro-computers to record check-outs and check-ins, Bennett said. The data collected by the micro-computers will be transferred to the installed ALTOS.

Library users will have access to the collection through use of the Subject Guide, a alphabetical list of subjects and where to find them in the library, Bennett said.

Huntington, who works with computers for a living, said she is now willing to give the library another chance.

"I didn't think the old system was the easiest to use, particularly for children," she said. "But I'm really anxious to try the new software."

Bennett said Huntington probably had trouble because her children are in their teens, and some of the books they want are in the adult section at the main branch whereas others are in the children's section at the Park Branch.

"I think it's important for children in their middle-school years to be able to make the transition to the adult section," Huntington noted in confirmation of Bennett's statement.

Yet Bennett noted some of the advantages to the new library branch.

"Since we have been in this building (the Park Branch), the circulation of kids' books has increased 40 percent," she said. "Attendance at children's programs have increased by 200 percent, and overall circulation is up by 22,000 items."

Be that as it may, some are still skeptical.

"I'm willing to give the new package a try, but what was so hard about the old (shelf and drawer) card catalog?"

This tree is as old as the hills

the tree, a core sample about the thickness of a pencil, according to Frank Quadro, a state forester.)

The trust recently purchased the land, formerly known as the Westbrook property, where the giant redwood is located. The point of purchase, said Mills, was "to preserve a quality of life." Attention to the necessity of saving the redwoods and wildlife where the largest tree in Monterey County still grows came about when Westbrook Land and Timber bought the acreage, then known as the Carmel Skylands Ranch.

In 1983 the Forest Practices Act was approved by the California Legislature, giving authority for logging permits to the state rather than the county. Up until that time Monterey County was very protective of its redwood resources.

Westbrook Land and Timber obtained a permit in 1984 to log 105 acres containing more than three million board feet of redwood as well as selected madrone and tanbark oak trees. Public hearings to prevent the logging were unsuccessful.

The late Earl Moser, former president of the land trust, endeavored to convince the Westbrook company's forester to spare the largest trees and sensitive areas. He was successful in part, however, more trees were to be removed, which prompted the trust to negotiate a purchase of the Palo Corona Ranch.

Seven years after the logging legislation, the trust, aided by the generous financial support of Arthur and Harriet Mitteldorf and a bequest from the estate of Helen Hobart, finalized the purchase of the ranch on Feb. 1, 1990 for $1.35 million.

Future plans for group tours to see the largest tree in Monterey County are being discussed, said Mills, who joined the land trust after moving from Los Angeles to retire in Carmel Valley. He got involved because of his concern about open space and land. "Land is only here once, it can't be replaced."

The land trust was established in 1978 by local residents as a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation with the goal of preserving the Big Sur Coast, and expanded in 1985 to include the greater Monterey Peninsula as well as Big Sur.

Specific goals of the land trust are to acquire and preserve land for open space; counsel property owners on preservation techniques available to them including possible tax benefits; serve as a vehicle for long-term stewardship of important natural resources, and serve as a bridge between private and public sectors.

CMS program will be rich in personal growth classes

By DAVID LELAND

ARMED WITH the information that students in early adolescence are principally concerned with physical and social development, Carmel Middle School officials have prepared a curriculum rich in personal growth classes.

While reading, writing and math still serve as cornerstones for students, those disciplines are augmented by seminars in areas such as conflict resolution, cooperative learning, stress reduction and self-esteem.

"If we can bring these things into focus for the students, we have a much better chance reaching them academically," said Principal Karl Pallastrini, adding that, once the students reach high school, academia becomes more balanced with physical and social growth. "We've become a model school in terms of dealing with self-esteem and learning readiness."

'Middle school (grades 6-8) is difficult to do. To do it right you have to deal with adolescent issues that teach kids to be responsible.'
— Karl Pallastrini

Indeed, after morale and attendance reached an all-time low several years ago, enrollment at the middle school jumped from 412 to 490 students during the past four years.

Pallastrini credits the return to public school from private institutions and an increase in families moving to the area as reasons for the change.

School officials are well aware of the crucial task in front of them, and have planned classes accordingly.

"Middle school (grades 6-8) is difficult to do," said Pallastrini, adding that schools either succeed or fail in their mission. "To do it right you have to deal with adolescent issues that teach kids to be responsible."

With that in mind, students and teachers alike will undergo an advisory program during the first quarter of school.

Presented by vice principal Lisa Fraser and mentor teacher Barbara Morriss, the advisory classes are aimed at changing traditional attitudes.

"Promises" include: comprehending the word connection and feeling a special sense of belonging; students demonstrating an enhanced accountability for personal behavior; and a contagious spirit of cooperation and optimism.

Sometimes, Pallastrini said, grownups give children too much credit in thinking they should be able to solve any problem.

"We make the assumption that kids can resolve conflict," he said, referring to the reasoning behind conflict resolution classes. "But that is a learned process."

PALLASTRINI SAID the school is also working with its students to develop pleasure reading habits.

"We're trying to get them back into finding reading as an escape," said Pallastrini, adding that many youths choose to bypass books in favor of television and video games. "It sets up a format for success; it gets kids to discover their own potential."

He added that students who are well read have better writing styles than their counterparts.

Beginning the second quarter of school, students will take part in a daily enrichment period, which allows more options than the advisory seminars.

Pallastrini pointed out that, for sixth-graders during health education classes, peer counseling will be introduced this year.

Already in existence at Carmel High School, peer counseling teaches students to help each other during problem times.

"We realize that we already have a good student-adult rapport," Pallastrini said. "(Now) we need good student-student rapport. We're going to capitalize on that innate need of this age group."

Students will learn to listen to their fellow students and taught simple advisement techniques.

For seventh-graders taking science, the QUEST program will be introduced this year. The values-clarification program, taught by Susie Bradley, teaches students to listen to their inner voice and to respond appropriately.

Counselor Donna Alonzo will bring in health professionals from the community for small seminars for eighth-graders this year to speak on abuse issues.

"It lets the kids understand that there are agencies outside the home," Pallastrini said.

CARMEL MIDDLE School Principal Karl Pallastrini believes that the school has been successful in helping adolescents help themselves during this critical time in their lives.

Italian traditions highlight annual Santa Rosalia fest

A MONTEREY tradition that brings the sights and tastes of Italy to town arrives Sunday, Sept. 9, during the Santa Rosalia Festival.

The all-day affair includes a parade, outdoor mass, a procession on Fisherman's Wharf, blessing of the boats in the bay, entertainment, and Italian food delicacies.

The event combines the celebration of two traditions — the Old Fisherman's Festival, a rejoicing that took place early in the century at the end of a successful fishing season, and the blessing of the fishing fleet, which originated in 1935 when a statue of Santa Rosalia was donated to Monterey's San Carlos Church.

There will be a procession through downtown Monterey starting at 9:30 a.m. Sunday. The procession will start on Webster Street and make its way through Monterey to the Custom House Plaza, where fishermen wearing traditional tasseled stocking caps will carry the statue of Santa Rosalia to the end of Fisherman's Wharf No. 1.

At 10:30 a.m., Bishop Thaddeus Shubsda will bless the fleet and the pleasure craft at the end of Fisherman's Wharf No. 1. The queen of the Santa Rosalia Festival, who is to be installed at a dinner dance at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8 in San Carlos Parish Hall, will lay a wreath of flowers in the ocean in memory of fishermen lost at sea.

After the blessing of the fleet, at about 11:15 a.m., Bishop Shubsda will celebrate an outdoor mass at the Custom House Plaza. Immediately afterward, there will be traditional Italian food specialties and entertainment.

Santa Rosalia was a Sicilian noblewoman of German origin who renounced all her worldly riches to become a recluse nun in the Sicilian mountains, where she went to meditate. She is credited with saving countless shipwrecked fishermen.

For more information and reservations for the queen coronation dinner-dance, call 372-9118.

David Richter to hold recital at MPC Sept. 9

DAVID RICHTER, American guitarist, will present a recital at 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 9, in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall. The concert is being presented by the MPC Community Services Office, funded in part by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Described in "Horizons," a publication of MPC's Community Services Office, as "an extraofdinary young concert guitarist who is going places in the musical world," Richter has performed to critical acclaim throughout the United States and abroad in such cities as London, Florence, Toronto, Valencia and Milan.

He is the recipient of a Solo Recitalist Grant by the National Endowment of the Arts for the 1989-90 concert season. This award is the most prestigious recognition of artistic excellence in the United States. He was the first prize Gold Medal winner of the 20th Concorso Internazionale of Milan, Italy in 1985; first prize winner of the National Wurlitzer Collegiate Art Competition, USA, in 1983, and California State Touring Artist in 1987.

This concert season, Richter will perform concerts in Vienna, Brussels, Naples, Los Angeles and San Francisco, among others. He also will be releasing a new CD recording.

For his MPC recital, Richter will play "Lord Strang's March Frog Galliard Fantasie" by John Dowland, "Nocturnal" by Benjamin Britten, variations of French and Turkish folk songs by Fernando Sor and Carlo Domeniconi, respectively; "Invocacion y Danza" by Joaquin Rodrigo, and "Homenaje and Danza del Molinero" from "The Three-Cornered Hat" by Manuel de Falla.

Admission is $7. For information, call the Community Services Office at Monterey Peninsula College, 646-4051.

Road work scheduled for valley road

ROADWORK ON Carmel Valley road may cause slower traffic and short delays between Sept. 10 and when work is scheduled to be completed Sept. 25.

According to Monterey County Public Works Department Director Gerald Gromko, the departmen't Monterey crew will be placing asphalt and crushed rock surface on Carmel Valley Road from Carmel Rancho Boulevard to Pilot Road.

Traffic will be controlled by flagmen and slower traffic and delays are possible, Gromko said.

Because some loose gravel will remain on the new road surface, signs reading "Loose Gravel — 25 MPH" and "Speeding May Damage Vehicle," will be posted until they are no longer needed.

"The application of this type of road surface reduces maintenance cost, extends the life of the pavement and improves the driving characteristics of the road," said Gromko.

Speakers on AIDS available for presentations

SPEAKERS FROM the AIDS Speakers Bureau of the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross are now available to speak to community groups, organizations or businesses on AIDS.

Presentations will include audio-visual materials and a variety of Red Cross pamphlets on AIDS.

Recently, 13 community volunteers have completed an intensive training course on AIDS and the transmission of the AIDS virus (HIV), as well as prevention and education strategies.

To schedule a presentation-workshop call 624-6921 with the date, time and meeting location of your group and a member of the speakers bureau will set up a presentation.

How to make the most out of a tank of gasoline

GASOLINE PRICES, as many motorists are already aware, have taken drastic jumps in the past two weeks.

The California State Automobile Association attributes the higher retail prices to the effects of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and the 5-cent state gas tax which began Aug. 1.

During this period of instability and rising gas prices, CSAA advises motorists not only to shop carefully for lower gas prices, but also to make 5 gallons of gas do the work of 6 gallons.

CSAA offers some gas-saving tips for the motoring public:

– Moderate, steady speeds increase gas mileage.

– Move with traffic flow. Don't change lanes constantly.

– Anticipate stops and be sure to slow down gradually.

– Don't idle your engine for extended periods. If you expect to wait more than a minute, shut off the engine.

– Riding the brake as you drive wastes gas and wears out brakes.

Additional fuel-saving suggestions:

– Properly balanced tires and aligned wheels help you use less gas and also help to lengthen tire life.

– Determine your correct tire pressure and check it frequently when tires are cold.

– Tune-ups twice a year can mean a 9 to 15 percent mileage improvement.

– Buy the recommended octane gasoline for your car. Don't buy a higher octane fuel than necessary.

– Don't "top off" your gas tank, which can cause overflow. Make sure the gas cap is the proper type and fits tightly.

– Choose the most direct, efficient routes for all driving.

– Try to schedule trips to avoid rush hours.

– Car pool or ride share whenever possible.

The on-going gas spot checks are conducted for CSAA by Computer Petroleum Corp.

Hare-raising art

PRINTS AND drawings by Beth Van Hoesen will be featured at First Impressions/Barbara Linhard Gallery, opening with a reception honoring the artist from 4 to 6 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8. at the gallery, Dolores and Sixth in Carmel. Van Hoesen is represented in several major collections here and abroad. Her work has been included in the collections of The Achenbach Foundation, Brooklyn Museum, Chicago Art Institute, Museum of Modern Art, Victoria and Albert Museum and others. Over her 30-year career Van Hoesen has established herself as a master of line and intaglio prints, where she has emphasized three areas: portraiture, still life and animals. Art critic Eliot Fremont-Smith summed up her work: "Beth Van Hoesen is a unique fine artist. Her hand, her intelligence, her amusement and quiet scale and respect for natural beauty — all are easily seductive. But these are works we look at more than once; they inform as they celebrate, and we become partners in their eloquence and mystery. One of her works include (above), "Sally," a drypoint, etching and aquatint from 1980 and the cover of her latest book "Creatures — The Art of Seeing Animals."

Seniors program needs participants

IN SEPTEMBER 1987 the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department began a program to benefit senior citizens of the community in two ways.

First, senior citizens who live alone and are often "shut-in" their residences with little or no contact with friends or relatives, can be provided with the security of knowing that someone does truly care about their welfare. Also, those concerned with their physical well-being will have someone to check on them daily.

Second, seniors interested in participating in some type of community program will be able to work with those in their own peer group by volunteering to place these daily telephone calls to the recipients of the program.

Currently, the department has a full staff of volunteers, however, anyone wishing to be placed on an alternate list to fill in when another caller is unable to make it or is away on vacation, is encouraged to call for information.

Anyone living alone, whether concerned about their health or not, and all those seniors wishing to make new friends or just have the opportunity to talk with someone new each day is encouraged to participate in this program.

Telephone calls are made daily by a volunteer beginning at 9:30 a.m. No participant is ever restricted to their home; they need only contact the police department in advance if they plan to be away during the time the calls are placed to avoid any confusion. If someone fails to answer their telephone, a patrol unit is sent by to conduct a welfare check at the residence.

In addition to these daily telephone "visitations," social events are also planned periodically as well as home visitations upon request.

Anyone interested in becoming a part of this program should contact Desk Officer Cathy Dampier at Carmel Police Department, 624-6403.

Volunteers gearing up for statewide beach clean-up

VOLUNTEERS all over California are gearing up for the biggest beach party ever – Adopt-A-Beach Coastal Cleanup Day on Sept. 22. The yearly beach cleanup is in conjunction with COASTWEEKS, a national celebration of America's coast, which runs from Sept. 15 through Oct. 8 this year.

Environmental, educational and other organizations coordinate programs and excursions during COASTWEEKS that focus attention on the value of our coastal resources. Adopt-A-Beach Coastal Cleanup Day is the highlight of COASTWEEKS in our state.

The Adopt-A-Beach program was started by the California Coastal Commission in 1985 as a way to involve local organizations, civic groups and schools in keeping their nearby beachs clean. It was also designed to help participants raise awareness in their communities about the hazards of beach littering.

Over the years, coastal cleanups have become a solid tradition in California. Thanks to generous support from the California State Parks Foundation and the Department of Conservation's Division of Recycling, the Adopt-A-Beach program has grown dramatically in the six years of its existence, blossoming into a mega-event. The program has also enjoyed tremendous support from the thousands of volunteers who participate in it each year – without them, the Adopt-A-Beach program would cease to exit.

Jennifer Hightower, Coordinator of the Coastal Commission's Adopt-A-Beach Program, comments on its success: "To illustrate the growth pattern of the program, in 1986 3,000 volunteers participated in the cleanup, collecting 110,000 pounds of trash.

"Three years later, 10,000 volunteers collected more than 200,000 pounds of trash and debris from the California coastline," says Hightower, adding that the statistics for the 1990 cleanup "are expected to easily surpass those of last year."

And there's more good news: The phenomenal success of the yearly cleanup has prompted the development of a Year-Round Adopt-A-Beach Program, also sponsored by the Coastal Commission. In the Year-Round program, participants agree to "adopt" a section of the coastline and clean it at least three times during the year.

Since youth groups and citizen groups have been strong supporters of Cleanup Day, the Coastal Commission now offers "how-to" guides for each type of group. Additionally, teachers who want to incorporate the Adopt-A-Beach program into their classroom activities can purchase the Adopt-A-Beach Curriculum, complete with a "how-to" cleanup guide, for $25.

"Education is vital in changing society's attitudes and behavior. That's why we've expanded Adopt-A-Beach to include a teaching curriculum," Hightower says.

Along with education and "stewardship" of the coast, Adopt-A-Beach promotes recycling, another important element of resource conservation. Students at Venice High School in Los Angeles recently demonstrated how Adopt-A-Beach can be a catalyst: they took the recycling principles learned through beach cleanups, started a very successful school recycling program, then used the proceeds earned from the recyclables to buy acreage in a Costa Rican rainforest. The students will donate the land to the Costa Rican national park system, thus saving it from destruction.

The Venice High School students started with a beach cleanup, and so can you. The main way to participate in one of the local cleanups in Coastal Cleanup Day is to first contact your County Coordinator (call the Coastal Commission for the name and phone number), then bring a trash bag and a pair of work gloves and join in. But there are leadership roles to be filled during cleanups, too.

For example, every cleanup needs a Beach Captain. The Beach Captain is the group leader, organizer and principal contact before, during and after the cleanup.

Data Captains also play a vital role during a beach cleanup. They oversee the recording of information on data cards about what specific types of garbage and debris are collected during the cleanup. (The data cards are used to identify sources of debris and provide real numbers to illustrate the magnitude of the debris problem.) After Cleanup Day, the information on the data cards is fed into a national marine debris database developed by the Center for Marine Conservation (CMC).

According to data recorded on the 1,724 data cards returned to CMC in 1989, tupes of beach debris collected in California cleanups included ropes, fishing nets, soda bottles, hair curlers, shampoo bottles, cups and napkins, to name just a few. Plastic six-pack rings, another common item, frequently end up maiming or killing seabirds and marine mammals through entanglement.

"Litter comes in all shapes and sizes. People have found some pretty weird things on the beach, like couches and old TV sets. One group in Monterey found a live octopus trapped in a glass bottle," Hightower says, "which proves that litter harms marine life."

For information on Coastal Cleanup Day, the Year-Round Adopt-A-Beach Program and other activites during COASTWEEKS, contact the Coastal Commission at 1-800-COAST-4-U.

Design review to be discussed by planners

THE CARMEL Planning Commission will be discussing the residential design review booklet at its regular meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 12. The decisions made at this meeting will affect the ways residents can add to their homes or build new ones.

The design review is the first item on the agenda and the meeting will be held at 3:30 p.m. at the Carmel City Council Chambers at City Hall on Monte Verde Street. The planning commission invites the public to voice their opinion on this or any other item on their agendas.

Council to hold special meeting on biennial budget

ALSO THE Carmel City Council has scheduled a special meeting for the 1990-92 biennial budget.

This discussion will take place at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 15, and it will also be held at the city council chambers.

Panetta urges national energy policy

REP. LEON E. Panetta urged President Bush Aug. 28 to work with the Congress to establish a comprehensive national energy policy to encourage energy conservation and the development of alternative fuels in order to reduce reliance on oil from the Middle East.

"It is critical that the President confront the Middle East crisis on two fronts — military and economic," Panetta said. "Our national security is threatened not only by Iraq's military aggression but also by our national dependence on Middle East oil. The consequences of that dependence were as obvious in the 1970's as they are today. It holds us hostage to any Middle East tyrant, undermines our national economy, and weakens the purchasing power of every American family."

Panetta urged the President to direct the Department of Energy to expedite the completion of its national energy strategy and to present that proposal to the Congress before the end of this session.

He said that an energy plan should provide for the revival of a number of energy conservation and alternative energy programs implemented or strengthened during the Carter Administration, most of which were allowed to lapse or were underfunded during the 1980's, including the following:

— Research into alternative energy sources such as clean-burning fuels, solar power, and other renewable energy sources;

— support for solar energy and other renewable energies;

— weatherization assistance for low and middle-income families;

— grant programs for schools, hospitals, and states to improve energy efficiency;

— energy efficiency standards for appliances;

— an increase in fuel efficiency standards for cars and other vehicles;

— promotion of the use of ethanol and methanol to produce cleaner-burning fuels;

— conservation programs for federal facilities; and

— expansion of the strategic petroleum reserve.

He said the strategy should also address other areas, including home heating assistance and tax rebates for the purchase of fuel-efficient vehicles.

Panetta said a strong national energy policy would bolster the nation's supply and reduce demand for energy, thus helping to maintain sanctions against Iraq. It would also "help in developing better stewardship of our resources for the future, encouraging a balancing of energy development with conservation," he said.

He added, "The presence of our military forces in the Middle East today demonstrates the clear and overwhelming need for a national energy plan to guarantee our independence from foreign oil fields.

"The tragedy is that we forgot the lesson of the last energy crisis. An initiative now to relearn and reapply those lessons is just as important in the long run as our military deployment in Saudi Arabia. We must not allow our national economic security interests to be held hostage by the Saddam Husseins of the world."

Colburn watercolors, collages by Landaker highlight CAA exhibit

'WAVE LENGTH," an exhibit of watercolors by Sam Colburn, and a collection of recent collages by Mabel Landaker are the featured exhibits opening Thursday, Sept. 6 in the galleries of the Carmel Art Association.

A reception for the artists is set 6 to 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8. The galleries are located on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues in downtown Carmel, and admission is free.

Mabel Landaker, a resident of the Monterey Peninsula since 1946, has painted primarily in oils until recently when she turned to collage as an exciting and creative medium.

Her work is represented in private collections throughout the country.

On the side of his house is a sign saying,"Sam Colburn Artist and Golfer." The latter obsession is the oldest as he started swinging clubs at a little white ball at age 18, while his brushwork began in 1937 when he moved to Carmel. Although he did not paint until then, he had much experience in Life Drawing at Chouinard's school of art in Los Angeles, and in drawing in classes given at Long Beach in the Adult Education program.

He is now an honorary life member of the Carmel Art Association having been accepted in 1940, and, his show will consist of his latest work. He has had one-man shows in New York, Aspen, Tucson, Virginia City and Elko-Nevada, Monterey, Pacific Grove, and, of course, Carmel. He did a series of panels for what used to be the Pilot Market, but is now Brunos, in Carmel. In one of his watercolors hung in his exhibit in Elko he had attempted a haystack. A local rancher said, "Hell, if anybody piled a stack of hay like that up here, we'd hang him."

He does a lot of drawing, and has covered the Crosby and what is now the AT/T. If you go into the County Courthouse on Aguajito Road, you willsee his "Net Menders" done on tile.

At age 45 he married Grace Meredith. She was already the mother of two children, Teryl and Ritchie McBride, both of whom now live in the Hawaiian Islands. Their two sons are Bolton Trent Colburn, and Cyrus Meredith Colburn. Grace is a fine artist working in watercolor, acrylic, and painting on wood. She does wood constructions, and her color is unusual. She is innovative.

Bolton Trent Colburn is curator and registrar at the Laguna Beach Museum of Art, and a champion surfer. Cyrus Meredith Colburn lives in Pacific Grove. He has had two successful showings of photographs at the Pacific Grove Museum of Art, does some very original pottery, and has won prizes for his garden displays at the Monterey County Fair.

Sam Colburn is also a writer. His "Tales From a Taxicab" is available at the Thunderbird, and Books Inc.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For additional information, call 624-6176.

commission primarily because it would entail major changes in the city codes.

"If we want to amend this, we'll have to change the frozen food ordinance," Mayor Jean Grace said in the majority.

Councilman James Wright was in the minority, saying, "I think it's inappropriate for the council to go on the record as part of the motion to encourge him to apply for a permit for a full-service restaurant when it appeared from the testimony (given by the building and planning staff), that he may not qualify (for such a permit)."

The council then unanimously approved a motion by White asking the planning commission to study takeout food ordinances and to try to define the types of eating establishments not covered under the city code.

"I think that's what we need so we can accomodate someone like (Wiener)," said Brooks. "According to the current code, we were obliged to turn him down."

She said the city code currently says a store in the frozen food category cannot sell pre-cooked foods, while a full-service restaurant cannot sell frozen foods to go.

IN OTHER matters, the council unanimously upheld a planning commission denial of an amendment to the use permit for Hartley Hill Gallery on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. Owner William J. Hartley wanted to sell jewelry as well as paintings and sculptures at the gallery.

"This bothers a lay person like me," said City Councilman Bob Fischer. "The definition of art is something you can see, not something you can wear."

In other business, the council unanimously approved a second reading of an ordinance prohibiting new subordinate units in the residential district, and a reduction of the speed limit on San Carlos Avenue between Eighth and 13th Streets from 30 miles per hour to 25 miles per hour.

Also on the agenda, the council reappointed Laurel Schumann and Bob D'Isidoro to the Carmel Recreation Commission. Grace also appointed Becky Allen to the seat on the commission that was vacated by Richard Falge.

Finally, the council appointed Myles Williams to the Community and Cultural Commission. Williams is filling a spot vacated by Lucinda Lloyd.

Area golf courses turning brown

Dale Boust, any kind of relief from the effects of the four-year drought would be welcome.

"We've already had property owners complain because the turf between the course and their property has turned brown," he said. "Further reduction in water use will have an effect on the game."

Boust said poor golf conditions indirectly hurt business for hotels and restaurants and in turn the whole area's economy. He said visiting golfers pay transient taxes which go into the coffers of local municipalities as well as the county.

"Even those that don't play golf come here because of the beauty of the courses," Boust continued. "The golf courses are part of our environment."

Boust said, however, the area's economy was heading for trouble for various other reasons besides the drought.

"(There is) a lack of promotion and extreme competition from other areas. (We need) the kind of promotion you see in Palm Springs, Illinois and Vancouver."

Boston said his employees would be hurt by a decline in business.

"I have 78 employees, and the reason they're here is the level of business we've been able to maintain," he said. "They're in jeopardy if the business declines."

"We're down an average of 3 percent (in patronage of) all four of our golf courses," said Mark Verbonich, vice president of corporate affairs at Pebble Beach Co. "More stringent rationing levels will result in an increase in stress on the turf and consequently continue to erode interest in playing peninsula courses."

Letter-writer Skuba summed up many visiting golfers' feelings when he explained his group's decision not to play peninsula courses this year.

"Your most frequent desire as a golfer is to play the Monterey Peninsula courses," he said. "But when the conditions are as they are now with the drought situation and the lack of watering for the fairways...we can fly to Northern California and stay and play for four days for the cost of maybe a day and a half stay on the peninsula."

Gas prices up by almost 10 cents

THE CALIFORNIA State Automobile Association (AAA) reports that August 1990's gas prices are averaging $1.31, a total of 9-1/2 cents higher than last month's survey of regular unleaded self-service gasoline at 600 gas retailers in northern California and the state of Nevada.

Gasoline prices have risen as a result of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and also the 5-cent increase in state gasoline tax which began Aug. 1.

The August 1990 prices are 16 cents higher than those surveyed a year ago for unleaded self-service gasoline.

CSAA continues to urge motorists to practice auto fuel conservation and to avoid panic-buying of gasoline.

CSAA suggests that you use your care wisely and take steps to conserve gasoline. Make 5 gallons of gas do the work of 6 by:

– Never idling your engine for extended periods. If you expect to wait more than a minute, shut off the engine.

– Car pooling or ride sharing whenever possible.

– Organizing errands and shopping into fewer trips.

– Having tune-ups twice a year, which can mean a 9 to 15 percent mileage improvement.

These kids aren't apt to forget their mom and dad's birthdays

By SUSAN BECK

KATIE COLTON and her husband Ken agree that they will never forget each other's birthdays.

That's because the Carmel Valley couple's two children who were born on each of their birthdays. Victoria Ranae, 22 months old, was born on her mother's birthday, Nov. 6. Zachary Auston, 2 weeks old, was born on Aug. 14, the same day his dad was born in 1958.

'It will be kind of nice for Zach to say that he was born on his dad's birthday. It will be special.'

— Ken Colton

The Coltons were married in 1986. Victoria was planned, and Zach "just happened," said Katie Colton.

"Beats me," said her husband about the timeliness of their children's births. Thrilled about it, however, he said, "It will be kind of nice for Zach to say that he was born on his dad's birthday. It will be special."

Apparently, being born on your parents' birthday is not that common, or it's just not talked about, said Marie Stewart Helms, manager of the Intermediate Intensive Nursery and Mother-Baby Unit at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

Helms has worked at the hospital for five years and can't remember ever hearing about same-birthday births. Debbie Gill, manager of labor and delivery, said that she is aware it happens, but has never heard about it either. Gill has worked in her department for 10 years.

The Coltons know a number of people who were born on their parents' birthdays, and like the others, birthdays in their family will be more special now, said Victoria's mother.

Zach's dad is familiar with extra attention on his birthday. He was adoped, and his family made the day especially important. Not exactly comfortable in the limelight, Colton said he looks forward to more of the focus going to his son. "This way, they will forget I'm getting older."

The first birthday celebrations will be more for the parents, said the Coltons. Their birthday presents are Victoria and Zach. In years to come, the plan is to have parties for the children in the morning, and a private time out in the evening for Mom and Dad.

The chances for more same-birthday births in the Colton family is for now uncertain. Katie Colton operates a day-care center out of her home. She wants more of her own children, but thinks she may change her mind within the next year. Her husband, a mechanical technician, is concerned about overpopulation. "We have replaced ourselves, and that's enough," he said.

THIS & THAT

By Florence Mason

It was meant to be

CHRIS RASCHE is a man with a mission: he is well along the way to publishing a national directory of organizations that help the disabled and seniors. It comes across clearly that he is highly motivated, in the fact that he is dedicating his life to this project. For him, it is simple: "I believe it was meant to be."

The way it started supports his point of view. Browsing in a local bookstore, Chris happened on a book misplaced, as he puts it, in the business section. It was about personal computers and the disabled, and it included a list of resource organizations. Chris wrote to a number of these organizations. From there "it just grew and grew," he said, still with a touch of wonder in his voice.

Today Chris and several assistants are working to get non-profit tax-exempt status, and an 800 telephone number. He hopes to have the directory published by the end of the year, after which will come a new challenge — marketing it. His efforts will be directed to the organizations listed in the directory and to all the people and places where the disabled and seniors may be: physicians, social workers, hospitals, schools, etc. So far the response by people he has contacted has been very positive. Most recently, the head of a Medicare financial department in Maryland told him that such a directory had been his own goal 20 years ago, when effective technology was not available. He applauded Chris' computer set-up and offered his help.

Chris has lived in this area for 28 years. He graduated from Carmel High and attended Monterey Peninsula College until health problems took over. A diabetic, he has been blind since last December. He now lives with his grandfather and mother in Pebble Beach.

The directory will be called "Connecting the Gap," meaning the gap between organizations and the people who need them. One of Chris Rasche's motivating forces is that he wants to combat stereotyping of blind, otherwise disabled, and elderly persons. While he "chips away" steadily on this undertaking, the task itself is improving his own life as well.

ENJOYED AT the Highland Games last month: a beautiful rendition of our national anthem by a tenor. But did he really sing, "Oh say, can you hear?" He did.

GO! TO see one or more of the winning plays in Carmel's annual Festival of Firsts Playwriting Competition. The four readings and one major production rank among the best ever submitted in this contest, which each year attracts hundreds of entries from all over the country.

It's a real treat and a bargain — the readings are free and you can see the winning play for only $5. Call Sunset Center for details. Enjoy!

SPLENDID SENIOR Chuck Poland is a man who feels "tip-top" every morning when he wakes up. At the end of each day he looks back and can say to himself: "I have done some good today" and "I have made someone laugh." Both are important to him. As a volunteer, he works hard at both.

Four or five days each week Chuck will drive for Meals on Wheels from 8:30 to 12:30. "I usually goof-off on Tuesday." he told me. "I play golf." He often helps his kitchen staff before starting out on his route. There are three meals to prepare each weekday and on Friday, many "customers" will get a second set of meals for Saturday.

In July, Chuck Poland started his seventh year as a volunteer driver for Meals on Wheels. It was a golfing buddy, Tom Dempsey, who introduced him to it. "He said to me, 'How would you like something to do in your spare time?'" Meeting the late Sally Griffin, then director of the program, was one of the things that convinced Chuck to give it a try.

"There will never be another Sally Griffin," Chuck said. "She was such a sweet gal." Chuck and his wife, Stella, were with Sally just before he died; it was that kind of relationship over the years.

Chuck's first thoughts about this new endeavor were of admiration for a group so well organized that they could deliver food to people in their homes — three meals a day in an area east in Carmel Valley and north to Marina. "This is quite a deal!"

Why does he keep going out, day after day, week after week, on this mission? "I guess I'm kind of crazy," he said. "But some day I may be old and I hope that some 'dummy' might come to my house and bring me food and say hello to me."

When he retired eight years ago, after 43 years in the wholesale furniture business, he wanted two things: "Have fun, and do something good for somebody."

Both are part and parcel not only of Chuck Poland's work for Meals on Wheels but also of the hours he spends selling tickets for the Carmel Mission Fiesta (twice a week from 2 to 4:30, for three months each year), and from Dec. 1 to Christmas as a bell ringer for the Salvation Army. It becomes fun when he dresses up and furnishes his own style of humor, especially if it involves children. For example, in the five years he has been stationed at Long's in The Crossroads, ringing the Christmas bell, he has alway dressed for the part: always in red or green (or some combination thereof), with a Santa Claus hat and cowboy boots. "It's great fun," he said, "and it does get special attention from the kids." It also helps fill the Army's coffers.

But there is something special in his voice when Chuck talks about Meals on Wheels and the elderly people he serves in that particular way.

"I may drive 65 miles in one day. There are 36 or 37 customers in Carmel — that's four routes where there used to be three. Or I may go way out in the valley. Or to Marina. There are 25 routes altogether, serving 280 people in their homes. I come into each home on my route with a smile and a little fun; it makes their day."

Chuck has never gotten over his amazement at how some old people live. "Many are in single rooms and they move out of their chairs only to go to the bathroom or to bed. Most don't have any relatives here. In fact, the Meals on Wheels driver may be the only person they see in five out of seven days."

Chuck reports what he sees that is "out of kilter." That could be people who haven't eaten the meals delivered, who live in unclean surroundings, or who don't seem to be well. And there are surprises, such as an elderly man or woman who greets him wearing a loosely tied hospital gown, or no gown at all. Chuck has learned not to show surprise at anything he sees or hears, to treat every incident with understanding, compassion, and tact. Also, he does whatever the customer asks him to do, within reason: bring up the newspaper, take out the trash, wind a wall clock, open the milk carton, change the light bulbs, find missing dentures (they were in a cup of coffee).

A lot of drivers find they can't do this job because of the suffering they see. "Turnover is tremendous," Chuck said. "Some days I have to run two or three routes. We can always use more drivers, and more people to help in the kitchen."

He also "pitches" the program to local service clubs, and during the recent Monterey County Fair he spent 14 hours in the Meals on Wheels booth "getting the word out. It was a lot of fun." He added that the Pine Cone helps as much as any other single thing when it comes to recruiting; there are several responses whenever the paper publishes a notice about it.

Chuck and Stella Poland came to Carmel from Texas in 1982. Their older son, Bill, was in the real estate business in San Francisco and helped them select their home. The Polands' second son, Jim, lives in Tennessee, where he is in chemical sales. Jim and his wife have given Chuck and Stella two grandchildren, while the Bill Polands are promising twins next January.

This splendid senior is also known for his firm and

BUSINESS BEAT

By David Leland

She's at it again

THAT WOULD be Annis Lembo, former energetic owner of Hampton Court Properties for almost a decade. Well, she's still energetic, but now she's become a "buyer's broker," representing only buyers in real estate transactions.

"I've always found it difficult to represent both sides in a completely fair and equitable manner," says Lembo, who will still market homes designed by partner Donald Britton of Britton Design.

Currently looking for an office at the mouth of the valley, Lembo says that instead of investing in and redecorating an entire office, she's interested in sharing a facility with someone involved with the business — real estate attorney, accountant, etc.

Which brings us to her logo, a golden letter "A." In addition to symbolizing her first name, Lembo says the logo can also stand for "and other pursuits."

Sure, Lembo is still pursuing a better time in the Big Sur Marathon, but she is also handling public relations efforts. Her latest coup? A blitz for the Monterey chapter of the League of Women Voters in an attempt to get people off of their collective duffs and vote.

A legal formation... Sometimes special counsel to the City of Carmel, attorney Michael Stamp and his associate Loretta Loop have joined forces with Joel Franklin in setting up shop in downtown Pacific Grove.

The firm will specialize in complex civil litigation, appeals and land use.

Both Franklin and Stamp also instruct students in Consitutional Law at the Monterey College of Law, and are responsible each year for the Heisler Moot Court.

Franklin recently won an appellate court decision for the Big Sur Land Trust in upholding the acquisition of the Bixby Creek preserve with Proposition 70 funding.

Company merger... Effective Oct. 1, the Tancredi Co. and J. Mahoney Co. will merge into offices in downtown Monterey.

The newly formed Mahoney-Tancredi Co. will specialize in commercial real estate, with Michael Tancredi assuming responsibility for the overall operation and John Mahoney concentrating on business development and personal production.

New to you... First American Title has opened offices in Carmel at Bob D'Isidoro's new office complex on Fourth between Mission and San Carlos.

The only title and escrow office located in downtown Carmel, First American Title is headed up by branch manager Linda VanHoutte, who has been active in the local financial world for almost 15 years.

Also employed at the Carmel branch are Lisa Connaly, assistant escrow officer; Fran Mangiapane, secretary; and Peter Rasmussen, public relations.

A critical issue... Local human resource folks gathered last week at the Dolores Street consulting offices of Buchholz and Rosensweig to clarify issues on dealing with AIDS in the workplace.

Sponsored by the San Jose-based career management firm of Drake Beam Morin, Inc., the seminar saw personnel people from Pebble Beach Co., Long's, Hyatt Regency Monterey and First National Bank of Monterey County.

It is fairly obvious that, with 270,000 Americans forecast to have contracted AIDS by next year, the disease is affecting employers at levels never dreamed of.

If the seminar made any one thing perfectly clear, it is that companies must understand that AIDS cannot be transmitted by casual contact.

The meeting was rife with stories on how major companies panic when an employee is diagnosed with AIDS. Many times the sickness results in dismissal, which not only is demoralizing for the person with AIDS, but it is also illegal.

On an everyday level, pharmacy employees, for one, often balk at contact with persons purchasing AIDS medication, as if they could contract the disease by taking their money.

A volunteer to the Monterey County AIDS Project, Robin Rosensweig told listeners that those from their early 20s to late 40s are most affected by the disease. In other words, those in their primary earning years.

She added that $55 billion was lost on business last year to due to the illness.

The message is clear for employers: confront the problem head-on and form a cohesive AIDS policy.

"It's an opportunity for us to make policy and adopt social responsibility," Rosensweig said.

Wine anyone?... If so, you might want to consider purchasing the 1,200-acre Durney Wine Estate in Carmel Valley for a cool $17.5 million.

The late William Durney and wife, Dorothy Kingsely, acquired the property nearly 40 years ago as a family retreat. The ideal climate and abundant water supply suggested the possiblity of growing grapes, and in 1977 the first vintage of Durney Vineyard Cabernet Sauvignon was produced.

Listed by Friia & Co. in San Francisco, the winery has a capacity of 15,000 cases.

For those with Green's thumbs... Sorry, I couldn't resist a little play on words concerning Green's on Mission, offering complete supplies for the Carmel gardener.

Located between Fourth and Fifth (look for the green and white cottage), Green's features plants, pots, patio and garden accessories. Local delivery is also available.

Learn the power of lobbying

"Lobbying, A Tool That Empowers People," is the topic of a seminar to be offered 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 22 at Monterey Peninsula College.

Leader will be Jo Day, who has 12 years experience with the state legislative process in Alaska and California.

The seminar will offer an overview of the legislative process, basics on how to use lobbying, the role of personal networking and practical application.

For more information, contact Monterey Peninsula College Community Services.

This & That

not always popular stands on some local issues. But that has to be another story.

If you know this man as a colorful character, you have plenty of evidence. He wears "loud" clothes every day — perhaps plaid pants with a striped shirt, for example. Referring to his Meals on Wheels customers, he says: "It wakes them up!" In December those customers will greet a cheery man in his Christmas outfits and Santa Claus hat. For golf, yellow is his favorite color.

His attitude is bright as well. "I'm always saying 'Howdy — how are you doin'?" At 70, life is fun for Chuck Poland, as long as he can share it with "customers" who are his friends.

Early music needs performers

The Monterey Peninsula College Creative Arts Department will offer a "Renaissance Workshop" course in early music.

The workshop, Music 180, will meet 4 to 6 p.m. Wednesdays. Needed are winds, strings and voices. Admission to the class is by permission of the instructor.

POLICE LOG

Like fine wine

POLICE RESPONDING to a domestic dispute Saturday found two 60-something men in combat over the object of their affections...a 60-something woman.

The incident, which took place at 7:20 a.m. Sept. 1 on San Carlos Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues in Carmel, found the two senior citizens battling it out. Both men wanted to file charges against each other, but none were filed, as it was mutual combat and the only real injury that occured was to the gentlemen's egos.

Don't leave home without it

WALTER JAMES Savage of Aptos was arrested Thursday, Aug. 30 for defrauding the Pine Inn out of $14.50. Savage, 65, who is also known as Greg Powell, ordered lunch and drinks from the Carmel establishment without first having the money needed to pay for his repast. He spent the night in the county jail and was released the next day on his own recognizance. Savage/Powell is required to repay the bill.

CARMEL TREE WALK SET FOR SEPT. 8

A "tree walk" to identify stressed trees and a demonstration of how homeowners can alleviate the strain on valuable trees caused by drought and insect infestation will take place in Carmel between 10 a.m. and noon Saturday, Sept. 8. The walk will begin at San Carlos Street and Third Avenue and proceed down San Carlos to 11th Avenue.

Members of the public and Friends of Carmel Forest, which is sponsoring the event, are invited to participate. City officials and members of the city's Beach and Forest Commission are expected to take part in the educational event.

City Forester Gary Kelly will demonstrate the deep watering and feeding of trees. He will also show how the infestations of the bark beetle, particularly of the Monterey pine, can be recognized, and the simple steps anyone can take to deal with the problem. Kelly will hold the demonstration just south of Fourth Avenue; interested residents can then take the walk from that point.

FOOD & NUTRITION SERVICES SPONSORS CHILD CARE FOOD PROGRAM

Food & Nutrition Services, Inc. (FNS) sponsors the Child Care Food Program (CCFP), a federally-funded program designed to ensure that all children receive nutritious, well-balanced meals while they are attending day care. All-day care providers serving meals to children in licensed Family Day Care Homes are eligible for monetary reimbursement through CCFP.

Other services available through CCFP include a lending library, monthly newsletters, nutrition information and workshops. The program has become increasingly important to Day Care Providers in helping to keep up with the rising cost of food and in keeping day care rates down for working parents.

FNS has been operating CCFP for over 10 years. Currently the program reimburses providers for more than 80,000 meals per month served to about 2,000 children in Santa Cruz, Monterey, and San Benito counties. CCFP also sponsors the Intergenerational Child Care Center in Santa Cruz, which provides meals for an average of 20 children a day, and 650 meals per month.

The program is available to all eligible children regardless of race, color, national origin, age, sex or handicap.

If you would like more information about the Child Care Food Program, please call CCFP Program Director Lillian Peixoto at 688-8840 ext. 244.

FNS is a community-based non-profit organization providing a network of services in Santa Cruz, San Benito and Monterey Counties. Other FNS programs include: the Golden Age Nutrition Program (made up of Meals on Wheels and Senior Dining Centers); Lift Line; Second Harvest Food Bank; Elderday; Women, Infants & Children (WIC) Program; Immigrant Advocacy Project; Garden Senior Residence; and Translation Services.

MONTEREY INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL STUDIES FORMS CENTER FOR LANGUAGE SERVICES

In response to the growing public demand for interpreters, translators and language instruction, Monterey Institute of International Studies has formed a Center for Language Services to help fill the need.

While the institute has been offering a variety of language skills for many years, "this is the first time the full range of services available to the public at large have been coordinated within the Institute," according to Robert G. Gard, president.

The center will provide escort interpreters, conference interpreters, simultaneous interpreters, equipment needed for simultaneous interpretation, court interpreters, translation of documents and language instruction on site under the direction of Marge Thoennes.

In addition, the center will provide professional training for instructors in translation, conference interpretation and court interpretation.

Through its well-established Training for Service Abroad (TSA) program, directed by D. Ann Mattingly, the Institute will continue to provide one-on-one intensive language training in a cultural context, on the Monterey campus.

Principal languages offered include: Chinese, English, French, German, Hungarian, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Russian and Spanish. Arabic, Czech and other languages are available upon request.

Among the many clients served by the institute currently or prior to the creation of the Center for Language Services are: American Association for the Advancement of Science, the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, the Atlanta Olympics Organizing Committee, Boeing Aerospace Corporation, Pepsi Cola International, the World Alpine Ski Championships and the Governor of Alaska (for an 11 nations conference). In addition, the institute provided interpretation services during the visit of Soviet President Gorbachov to Stanford and San Francisco and for Pope John Paul, II during his visit to California.

Monterey Institute is a fully accredited, graduate, professional school with approximately 600 students from 46 nations and is currently celebrating its 35th anniversary.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Self-pity is destructive

From Sept. 9, 1982
Carmel Pine Cone

On the 10th of August we celebrated the Feast of my Patron Saint, Lawrence, one of the seven Archdeacons of Rome martyred in the third century persecution of the Emperor Valerian. When Lawrence was ordered by the Procuraty to hand over the gold and silver of the church, he gave it to the poor.

He assembled the lame, the halt and the blind and said to the Roman official, "Here are the treasures of the Church." Lawrence was thrown on a gridiron over live coals. With gallows humor he said, "I am done on this side, now turn me over." A friend of mine contends that St. Lawrence should be the patron saint of all barbequers.

Everyone, at one time or another, is put on the fire. The test is not what the fire does to us but what we let the fire do to us. We give in to self-indulgence and we pay a price. But the greatest price is paid for the self-indulgence of self-pity.

Self-pity is destructive and it is no friend. Suffering and trial should become a test of character as they were to Job. How do we act and react when the cards are down?

In crisis are we cowards or heroes? Do we deserve, like St. Lawrence (Lauream tenens) to be around with a laurel wreath, a symbol of victory over self? Finally, it is not suffering or dying for faith that is so hard, it's living it. Amen.

In a national survey of 1,750 Americans age 50 and up, 66 percent said they consider the 50-plus years as their personal "best of times." Of the others, 21 percent said the years between 35 and 49 were best, and 11 percent said the same about the period from 18 to 34.

Jane Evans, longtime executive director of a national women's organization and an authority on parliamentary procedures, is proud of her age. Evans says: "I was born in 1907, which clearly marks me as an octogenarian. However wise or foolish it may be, I have never denied my age nor been unduly concerned about it — perhaps because I've been too busy." She still drives her car, works in several capacities with heavy responsibilities, and pursues her hobby of boating by piloting her own motor cruiser.

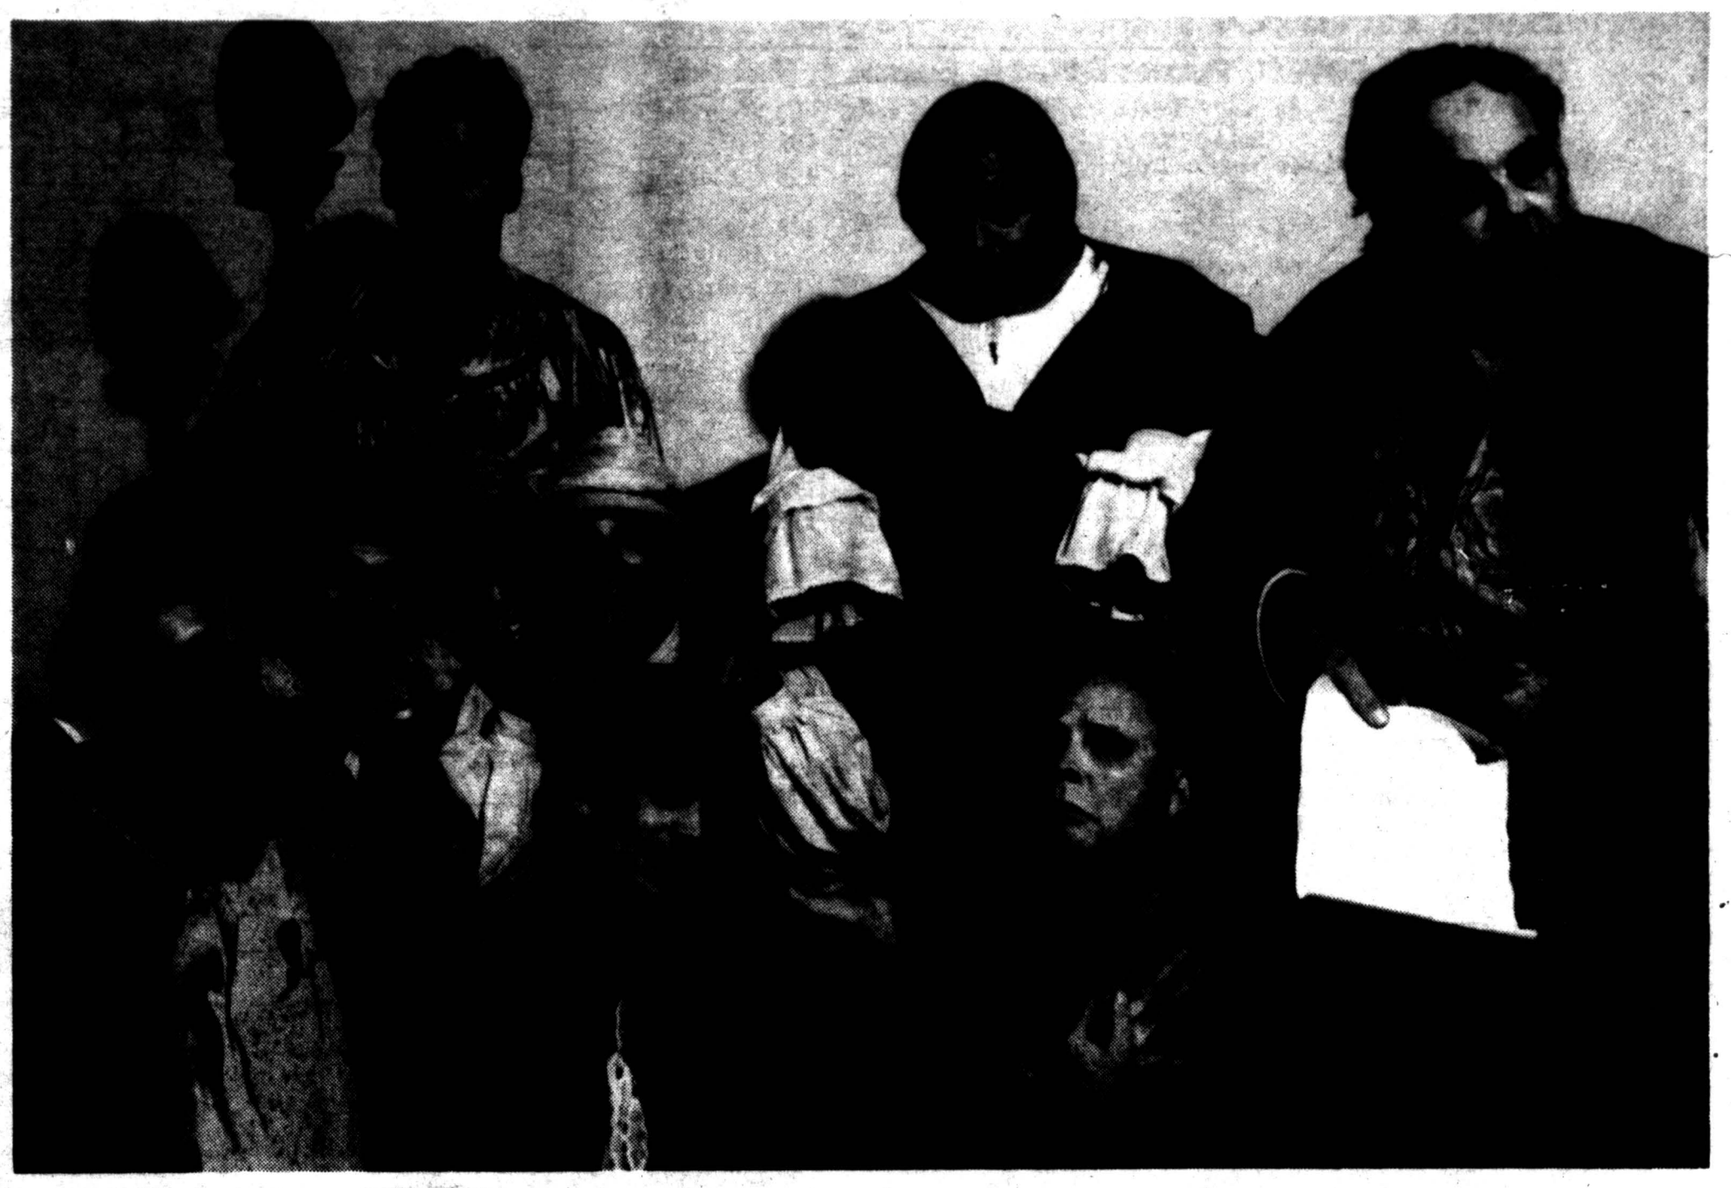
Did William Shakespeare really author those plays?

By ANNE PAPINEAU

IT STARTED with a television program.

Stephen Moorer, founder of Grove-Mont Theater, is also the guiding force behind the 1990 Carmel Shake-speare Festival, a multi-media collection of events filling five upcoming weeks at Carmel's Outdoor Forest Theater.

In addition to providing cultural enrichment, the festival has an ulterior motive. Moorer, a first-rate drum



THE RUSTICS, a group of would-be actors who hope to entertain at the royal wedding, find them their plans bewitched by the fairy kingdom in A Midsummer Night's Dream, opening Friday, Sept. 14 at the Outdoor Forest Theater in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

ARTS & LEISURE

beater, is trying to right what he perceives as a literary wrong.

Moorer is an avowed "Oxfordian." That is, he is a lover of theater and history convinced that the Shakespeare plays were not penned by the bard to whom they are credited. To Oxfordians, the author is in fact a nobleman, one Edward de Vere, 17th Earl of Oxford.

"There are literally thousands of pieces of circumstantial evidence that tie de Vere to the plays, from lines to direct references to his life in the plays," Moorer asserts.

He will direct one of the plays of dubious authorship as part of the festival. A Midsummer Night's Dream opens Friday, Sept. 14, in the historic Carmel theater.

Moorer, who has appeared on the Forest Theater stage since childhood, was infected by the Oxfordian theory while watching a PBS television show, "Frontline." The show outlined the argument of de Vere as author, and challenged the historical precedents that credit William Shakespeare with the famed plays and poetry. The arguments are hardly new, but Moorer's enthusiasm remains fresh.

"Noblemen could not write for their livelihood. It was looked down upon. It was looked down upon to write for the theater," says Moorer with the fervor of the impassioned. "For noblemen to be associated with a group of players would be against all rules of court."

According to Moorer's research, Oxford was third in line to the throne. Much was at stake. The answer: de Vere wrote under a pseudonym, and possibly as part of a group.

"I'm not saying Oxford did it alone. He died in 1604, when the plays were still supposedly being written," Moorer explains. "I believe de Vere wrote the works in the late 1500s and a group of others took and adapted them with his blessing. But credit couldn't go to a nobleman."

The alleged pseudonym, Shakespeare, "is perfect for a dramatist," he adds. "In ancient Greece, Pallas Athena was recognized as the 'spear shaker,' and she was also the patron goddess of Athens, home of the theater. And in Rome, the Guild of Poets and Dramatists met in the temple of Pallas."

For centuries, the Shakespeare authorship controversy has been debated in print, and now, on television. But Moorer is obviously intrigued by it all. He journeyed to Edward de Vere's ancestral home, Castle Hedingham in England.

"The castle has the largest proscenium arch in its grand hall of any in England. You just picture grand plays and masques being staged there. De Vere was also the Lord High Chamberlain of England. Shakespeare's theater company was known as the Lord Chamberlain's Men."

Moorer hopes to bring a touch of authenticity to his production of A Midsummer Night's Dream by Shakespeare/de Vere.

The famed frolic, repleat with confused lovers, enamored noblemen, bumpkins and a diverse fairy kingdom, will have discount previews Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 12-13.

"In Elizabethan theater, the fairies were not aerial, floating beings. There were reports in Elizabethan times that people were rolling in the aisles during this play, and not just laughing at the rustics. The fairies weren't nice, they were mischevious," Moorer asserts. "They were brought on stage to create disruption. I've carried that out even to Tatiana's fairies. I have them all being comic, not balletesque."

GROVEMONT THEATER veteran John Rousseau tackles the role of Bottom, a weaver transformed into an ass by the mischievous Puck.

What the director is striving for is a traditional interpretation.

"By traditional I don't mean boring, I mean exciting. It was written to celebrate a wedding," he says. "Most think it was written in celebration of the wedding of Earl Stanley, Earl of Derby, and Susan Vere, daughter of Edward de Vere, Earl of Oxford. That's one of the things the Stratfordians and Oxfordians agree upon."

As for the hyphenation of Shakespeare's name, Moorer has revived one form the name took in several published folios. Surnames often had diverse spellings in Elizabethan England, according to the whims and spelling skills of the keeper of the record books.

The Carmel Shake-speare Festival formally bows Saturday, Sept. 8 with "The Mad Hatter's Tea Party." Devised on

Assorted artists interpret heaven for Cherry Gallery show

"HEAVEN," a group exhibit exploring artistic interpretations of paradise, will open Saturday, Sept. 8 at the Cherry Foundation in Carmel.

Fourteen artists were encouraged to submit work depicting their individual views of heaven. The result is a mixture of disparate images, scenes and motifs — from Andrew Xeino's empyrean landscapes, to Dick Crispo's collage-style watercolors and Anita Benson's whimsical dream figures.

Andrew Xenio's shimmering landscapes are both seemingly traditional and expesssionistic documents of the religious and psychological symbolism associated with heaven — though his oil paintings could also be viewed as Monet-style scenes from the French countryside.

Monterey artist Dick Crispo presents yet another aspect of the exhibit's diversity. His collage, Died and Went to Heaven, brings the subject into unity with skillfull composition that juxtaposes personal and historical references on a field of watercolor with collage. Using a limited repertoire of materials — 19th century book illustrations and watercolor paint — he evokes a variety of moods and associations.

In contrast, S. Forrest Perry's pyramid shapes are pitted against one another on a field of color rooted in cinnamon and red giving the work a restrained and monumental feeling. Within this pictorial vocabulary, Perry displays a wide range of form and feeling with oblique references to heaven and earth.

The core of the exhibit contains recent work by Rebecca Alex, Jan Wagstaff, Lynne Chester, Zerrin Demirsu, Embree De Persiis, George Everett, Berit Friedman, Noel Mapstead and Kathleen Crocetti.

A reception for the artists will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 8 at the Cherry Foundation, located at the corners of Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. The Cherry Foundation is open 11 to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday. For more information, call 624-7491.

The exhibit can be seen through Sept. 29. Cherry Foundation exhibits and programs are sponsored, in part, through grants from the city of Carmel and the Monterey County Cultural Council.

EMBREE DE PERSIIS employed porcelain, gold leaf and acrylic to produce Astral Transversion II. The five-by-three-foot work is one of many meant to depict "Heaven," in a new show on that theme opening Saturday, Sept. 8 at the Cherry Foundation Gallery in Carmel. Several artists are represented, and the opening reception will take place 4 to 6p.m. The gallery is on Guadalupe and Fourth in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Exclusive

NEWSBREAK: Years roll. The at-home files get thicker. It's still big fun to decorate this local space with a national exclusive.

When she played Kuumbwa Jazz Center many months ago, superb vocalist Shirley Horn revealed that she had just signed with a larger label — Richard Seidel's Polygram Records. That was only the first fact in what has become a knockout story.

Polygram's Sheila Mathis makes known a project whose size matches Miss Horn's talents as quietly incisive singer and pianist of advanced harmonics. The new Shirley Horn album will feature guest shots by Miles Davis, Stan Getz, Wynton and Branford Marsalis — plus Shirley fronting her own trio on other cuts.

The Seidel-produced package will be released in January with Miss Mathis assigned as product manager. "The whole thing spotlights Shirley," Sheila said. "Richard simply wanted to give her an extraordinary setting. We see it this way: this great lady's killer album."

Stan Getz was laying down his track on the same afternoon that we spoke. Seidel's opinion of the project's significance? Well, a pro photographer was put to work documenting sessions. Prints will be forwarded for later publication here.

Miles discovered Miss Horn in the '50s. She made bright waves and then quit the road to raise her daughter — now grown and a postal executive in the nation's capital. That's where Shirley still lives today.

Not incidentally, Kuumbwa announces that tenorman Branford will work there later this month (9/17) — his first gig in our region. Check with Monterey's Center Stage Ticketing.

On Monday night (9/10), Kuumbwa will continue its 15th anniversary celebration by offering two groups which helped open the venue all those years ago. The Hy-Tones (Paul Contos, Stan Poplin, Paul Nagel, Jimmy Baum) and Smith Dobson Trio.

KRML RADIO has begun running my jazz news show. Segments air once daily (excepting Sunday). Various times. Right up till the 33rd annual Monterey Jazz Festival's opening night (9/21). Made possible by MCI Communications, which sponsors the fest too.

On that note, some arena ducats still were available for the strongest MJF lineup in years: Getz, Oscar Peterson, Ernestine Anderson, Poncho Sanchez, Tito Puente, Gerald Wilson Orchestra, Joe Williams, Stanley Turrentine, Michel Petrucianni, Diane Reeves, Dizzy's latest group, on and on. Call the fest office if you wish season ticket info: 373-3366.

SHERATON spokesmen have been insisting for weeks that budgetary adjustments would not affect the Monterey Bay Club's jazz policy. The latest release from PR chief Tia Gindick says "no jazz on Mondays during October." Instead — Monday Night Football. (During the recent facelift, a big screen was installed behind the bandstand.) Upside: look for increasingly creative employment of duos over there. As opposed, of course, to larger jazz units. Dancers still will reign on Friday and Saturday nights.

So then. Smith and Gail Dobson (9/6), Spang-a-lang (9/7-8), Alan Berman (9/9), Don Pendergrass (9/10), Rob Lautz (9/11), Kenny Stahl (9/12). The Stahl group also will work that jazz series put together by talent manager Tup Lohse at Giovanni's in Concord (9/8).

JAZZ PHOTOGRAPHER Will Wallace's show at Pacific Grove Art Center features 23 pieces — all but one in color. Each portrait deserves attention on its own terms. No fewer than half a dozen could run in any national magazine under the sun.

For example: the shot of producer Bill Graham which Will got during that Watsonville earthquake benefit starring Carlos Santana. Bill stands revealed — the impatience along with the real intelligence, the quick temper, the caring. All in tough potential. Right under the surface.

Will's workways — careful pacing, compassion, deep respect for the music's makers — serve him well. You'll never find a more spiritually intimate take on tenorman Pharoah Sanders (eyes heavenward). And the visual interplay between sweating reedman Arthur Blythe and drummer Don Moye speaks most intensely of collaboration and commitment. Miles gets his due via three side-by-side studies — sheer power held in check by the moment's needs. (How like a great prizefighter Miles can be. Every move balanced and measured against the next.)

Stockton ceramic sculptor Joe Mariscal captures James Moody's great joy and the world-battered soul of Jimmy Witherspoon. He said new work will focus on female vaocalists — Dinah Washington, Lady Day.

Exhibit closes later this month (9/29).

THE SEVENTH annual Monterey Peninsula Jazz/Art Show happens on Saturday night (9/9) at Seaside's Oldemeyer Center. Worthy cause: scholarships for student artists who can use the help.

Music portion's topped by saxist John Handy with Class — violin-playing singers Julie Carter, Sandi Poindexter, Tarika Lewis — and guest vocalist Buddy Conner. Also appearing will be Monterey Peninsula Youth Jazz Ensemble, talented county-wide gang pulled together by Monterey Jazz Festival Education Committee. It's $12 per; tickets available right at the center.

The art show includes sculpture, photography, mixed media, canvas. Refreshments. Socializing and browsing start at 7:30 and entertainment kicks off an hour later. Info: 899-6270.

SIGHT BITES: Jazz photographer Lee Tanner's new item — a sturdy, beautifully-designed Jazz Address Book issued by Pomegranate Publishing in San Francisco. Exactly 40 black-and-white images of artists like Jimmy Rushing, Eric Dolphy, Milt Jackson, Sheila Jordan, Monk, Dexter, Miles, Randy Weston, Nina Simone, Steve Swallow, Art Blakey, on and on. Excellent work. Lee says he'll take orders at $14.95 per plus $1.50 for handling. P.O. Box 8236 — Berkeley — 94707.

— Jazz pianist Ace Hill says he'll again teach Black History at Hartnell College come springtime. The current course has great popularity. Ace continues his duo work (with bassist Ian Fugate) at Doubletree Lounge.

— Percussionist and musicologist John Santos suffered serious injuries in an auto accident. Musician friends plan an October benefit (10/1) at Kimball's East in Emeryville. To help John pay off medical expenses.

— Papa Jake Stock and friends will play the Monterey Plaza Hotel Sunday Series (9/9). Noon till four on the lower terrace. No cover; no minimum.

— Jazz vocalist Madeline Eastman will be interviewed at 3:30 Thursday afternoon (9/6) over KGO Radio. Her first feature album has been released by Mad-Kat Records (with Tom Harrell's trumpet).

— Great title on Paul Simon's upcoming album. Rhythm of the Saints.

— KUSP-FM needs contributions for a new remote broadcast van. Call 1-476-2800 if you care to help. The station will run remotes on Monterey Jazz Festival arena shows again this year.

— San Francisco Blues Festival's coming up at Fort Mason Great Meadow (9/15-16). Albert Collins, Katie Webster, Buckwheat Zydeco, Ruth Brown, Koko Taylor, Johnny Otis, Joe Louis Walker, so many others. Ticketmaster.

— Don't forget Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra. Monday nights at Mission Ranch Barn.

Santa Rosalia Festival celebrates Italian culture

A MONTEREY tradition that brings the sights and tastes of Italy to town arrives Sunday, Sept. 9, during the Santa Rosalia Festival.

The all-day affair includes a parade, outdoor mass, a procession on Fisherman's Wharf, blessing of the boats in the bay, entertainment, and Italian food delicacies.

The event combines the celebration of two traditions — the Old Fisherman's Festival, a rejoicing that took place early in the century at the end of a successful fishing season, and the blessing of the fishing fleet, which originated in 1935 when a statue of Santa Rosalia was donated to Monterey's San Carlos Church.

There will be a procession through downtown Monterey starting at 9:30 a.m. Sunday. The procession will start on Webster Street and make its way through Monterey to the Custom House Plaza, where fishermen wearing traditional tasseled stocking caps will carry the statue of Santa Rosalia to the end of Fisherman's Wharf No. 1.

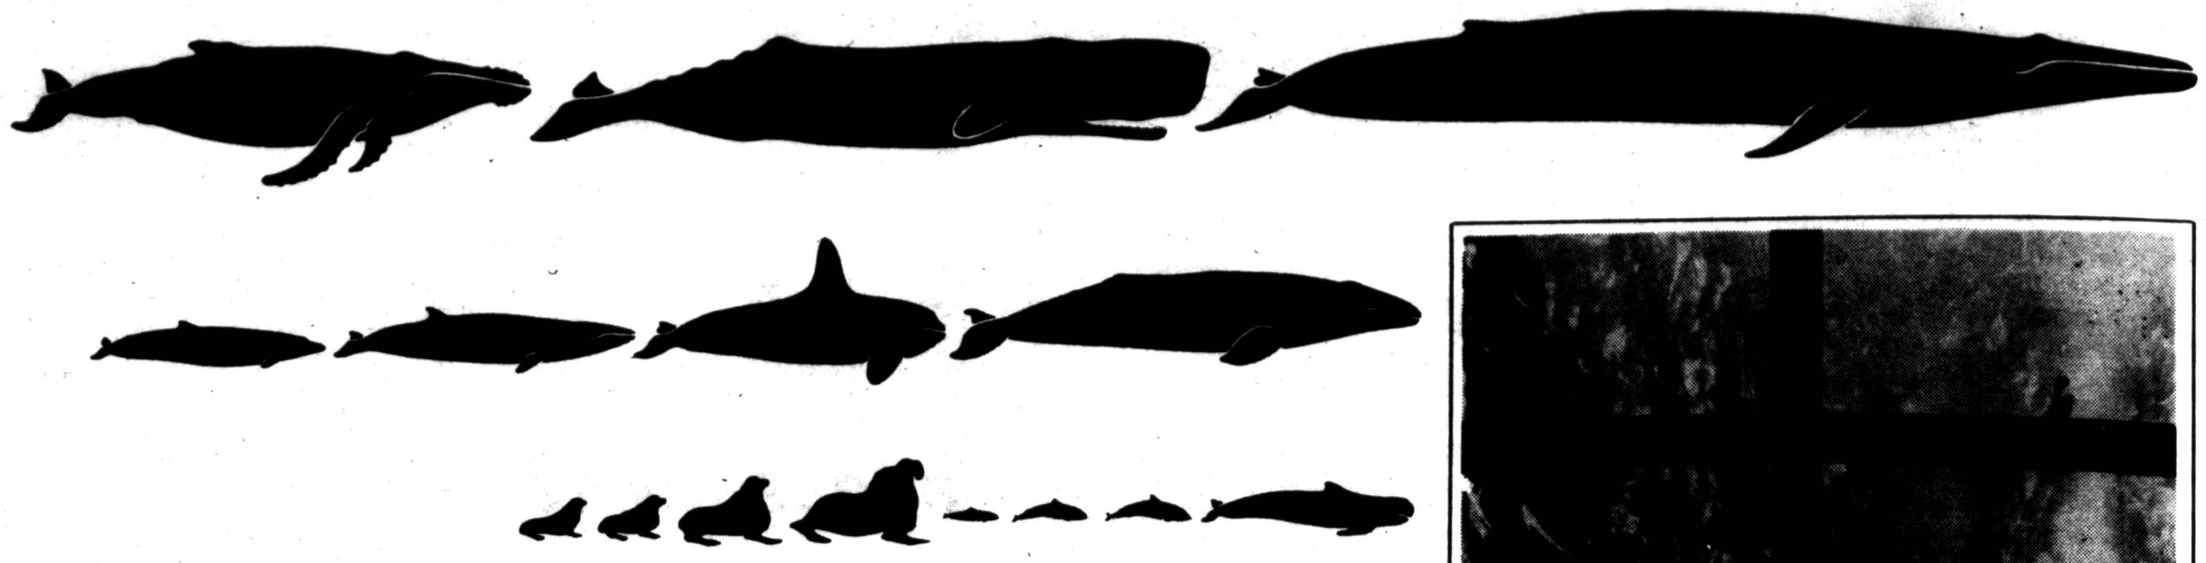
At 10:30 a.m., Bishop Thaddeus Shubsda will bless the fleet and the pleasure craft at the end of Fisherman's Wharf No. 1. The queen of the Santa Rosalia Festival, who is to be installed at a dinner dance at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8 in San Carlos Parish Hall, will lay a wreath of flowers in the ocean in memory of fishermen lost at sea.

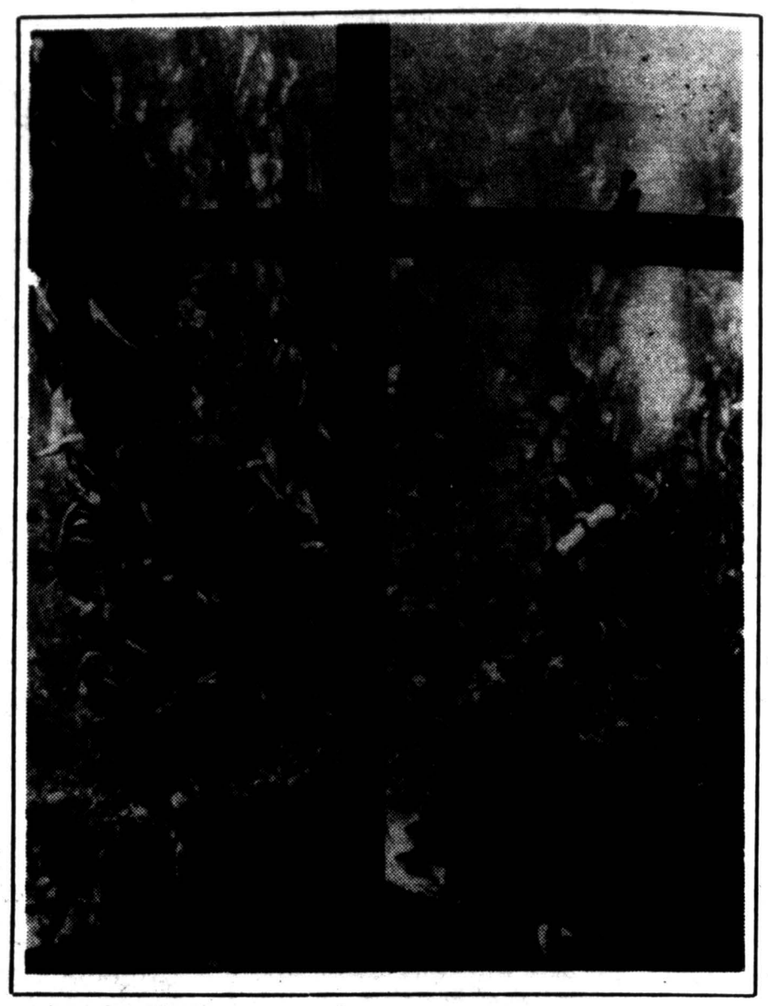
After the blessing of the fleet, at about 11:15 a.m., Bishop Shubsda will celebrate an outdoor mass at the Custom House Plaza. Immediately afterward, there will be traditional Italian food specialties and entertainment.

Santa Rosalia was a Sicilian noblewoman of German origin who renounced all her worldly riches to become a recluse nun in the Sicilian mountains, where she went to meditate. She is credited with saving countless shipwrecked fishermen.

For more information and reservations for the queen coronation dinner/dance, call 372-9118.

Monterey Bay Aquarium





THIS 335,000 gallon exhibit represents a diver's view of a towering kelp forest community. As giant kelp needs sunlight and wave motion to survive, the 28-foot-high tank is open to the sky. Jets hidden in the rockwork and a surge machine maintain vital water movement.

IT'S STATE-OF-THE-ART, affording an up-close and personal view of some 525 species of fishes, mammals, birds, invertebrates and plants found in Monterey Bay.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium, constructed "in the footprint" of the Hovden Cannery on the west end of Cannery Row — opened to the public in October 1984. A $50 million gift from David and Lucile Packard of Silicon Valley fame made into reality the conversion of a former cannery site into a celebration of colorful and complex Monterey Bay marine life, from sharks to brittlestars to sea otters.

Open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Christmas, the Monterey Bay Aquarium houses 23 major indoor and outdoor galleries and exhibits focusing on the many habitats of Monterey Bay. The aquarium is now a self-supporting, non-profit entity.

Rooflines and even lighting fixtures echo the original Cannery Row style documented by John Steinbeck in his 1945 novel of the same name. Visitors entering the aquarium walk past the original Hovden Cannery boilers, pumphouse and warehouse. These were virtually the only features that could be salvaged from the structure. The rest of the aquarium is new and strictly high-tech. Its 33 major exhibit windows, manufactured by Mitsubishi Rayon of Japan, include panels that are seven and one-quarter inches thick and weight 2.73 tons each. Two 16-inch diameter, 980-foot-long intake lines draw up to 2,050 gallons of sea water per minute from a depth of 55 feet in Monterey Bay. The seawater system permits varying levels of filtration — depending on the needs of the 6,500 specimens that live in the aquarium. These levels range from raw seawater to pressure-sand filtered, de-embolyzed seawater.

And then there are the animals. The Monterey Bay Aquarium is a place where visitors can gaze up into the cathedral-like branches of a kelp forest as a diver explains its intricacies from the other side of a seven-inch-thick window, stare eye-to-eye with a tank's worth of frisky sea otters and brave petting a bat ray that has no stinger.

Virtually all of its inhabitants can be found in Monterey Bay.

Also described by many as "a gawker," the third-of-a-million gallon Kelp Forest exhibit presents a diver's-eye view of a complex undersea community. The exhibit can be viewed from three levels within the aquarium, and houses a towering forest of Macrocystis pyrifera, the California coastline's giant kelp. Jets hidden in the rockwork walls and a surge machine maintain the constant water motion kelp requires. This seaweed, which locally grows up to 10 inches a day, forms a canopy open to the sunlight at the surface.

Also in the "gawker" category is the Monterey Bay Habitats exhibit, a 90-foot-long, hourglass-shaped tank that depicts four bay habitats: the deep reefs, sandy seafloor, shale reefs and the wharf. Large sharks, bat rays, salmon, striped bass and other open-ocean fishes roam the Monterey Bay exhibit. Viewers have a choice to observe the goings-on through bubble-shaped windows or a series of massive acrylic panes.

An interlocking series of habitat galleries and interpretive exhibits explores the facts, myths and mysteries of marine life in the region. Here the curious may study an elegant chambered nautilus hovering in mid-water, sleek and speedy squid, the giant octopus, hermit crabs, sand dollars and dozens of other oceanic denizens.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium operates many programs, including research and education. Approximately 100,000 persons are members, entitling them to unlimited admission, a newsletter, special programs and other benefits. For details, call the Membership Department, (408) 648-4880.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium is located at 886 Cannery Row on its west end, between the borders of Monterey and Pacific Grove. Admission is $8 general, $5.75 for students and senior citizens (65 and over), $3.50 for children ages 3 through 12. Group rates for 20 or more are available by reservation. Call (408) 648-4860, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Tickets can also be pre-ordered through Ticketron outlets. There are no Ticketron outlets on the Monterey Peninsula, however.

All exhibits are wheelchair-accessible.

For recorded information about the aquarium, call (408) 648-4888.

For the convenience of aquarium visitors who have their own cars, parking is available at the Cannery Row Parking Garage. Rates are 75 cents per hour, up to a $5 maximum.

The Farm in the Dell

One seldom, if ever, thinks about the topography of Carmel. But if you could imagine Carmel in about 1900, before all the streets and houses gathered, you would see a broad descending hillside going from Carmel Hill at 600 feet down to sea level at the beach. This was the area Messrs. Devendorf and Powers laid out in a neat network of streets. All square.

Of course, this charming countryside was not without its small interruptions: a stream here, a small canyon, a hollow now and then. One such hollow lies today between 10th and 11th on Junipero. And in that dell two special houses have risen lately. They are related — same architect, same builder — but they are not twins. We are here concerned with the larger one. (More on the other later).

It is hardly a farm. On an oversize lot, 60x100, it approaches that; but the house could never be confused with a farmhouse. It's over 1900 sq. ft., with 2 large bedrooms, 2½ sumptuous baths, large living room and spacious kitchen and family room.

There's a sense of uplift in this house. All the ceilings are vaulted. Twelve (12!) skylights bring in light. All the floors are oak, stained lime-light. There are light oak cabinets everywhere (we stopped counting at 75) and shelves to match in abundance. Track lighting is in almost every room. There are private decks off both bedrooms, and a spacious garage in front. There's voluminous storage space (screened) under both decks.

The kitchen has a sort of reverse "L" tiled counters, with every built-in appliance you could wish: stove, oven, microwave, refrigerator, dishwasher. And that opens to the dining room with its own deck.

The entry has a beveled glass door with etched decorations, tile floor, lots of space. And of course, there's an elevated fireplace in the living room, plus big windows and skylights.

You wouldn't find this sort of house in Nebraska, or Iowa or anywhere in the Midwest. It's pure Carmel, and a lovely place to live.

The exterior is shingles, natural color. The roof is an eccentric pattern of shingles, and this house is built to last. We know this builder, and that's the only way he works! It's $695,000.

Also on the lower level is a studio/bedroom and full bath, with an outside entrance. Views from both levels. $1,495,000.

HOMESITE IN PEBBLE BEACH

INVEST IN CARMEL

IN DOWNTOWN Carmel, near the new branch of the library...two structures on a 40 by 100-foot lot housing a total of four offices. There is slightly more than 1500 square feet of leasable space. The property has been completely remodeled and updated in the recent past, and it shows well. Call for details. REDUCED TO $625,000.

DOWN GOES THE PRICE

A MAGNIFICENT view up and down Carmel Valley lies before your eyes from the deck of this newly completed home. Living room, family/dining room, kitchen and master bedroom suite are on the second floor so as to take advantage of the wonderful views. Downstairs, you'll find two more bedrooms, a bath, and a convenient laundry. We think you'll be taken by the open, airy as well as generous use of marble for a touch of luxury. REDUCED to $515,000.

MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

SOUTH OF OCEAN Avenue, Carmel's most wanted area...and the location for this four-bedroom older home that's crying out for deft decoration. You enter the house to find a good-sized living room, beyond which is a kitchen with laundry porch, and a large deck in the rear to catch the afternoon sun. The bedrooms are upstairs — and there's even a peek of ocean. Outside is a new driveway leading to a carport in the rear. Shows well from the street. REDUCED to $599,000.
